All its fine Flavour is sealed in the Packet!

Cleeve's
BUTTER
GUARANTEED PERFECTLY PURE

Slab butter loses the best of its flavour and delicate vitamins by exposure. That's why Cleeve's tastes so different from other butters. It retains all its fragrant flavour and goodness by being sealed in the packet immediately after churning. Cleeve's butter is extraordinarily rich in flavour and vitamins. This is because it is made only from the milk of chosen cows grazed on the succulent herbs and grasses of the Golden Vein—among the richest pasturelands in the world. You must try a packet of Cleeve's to-day.

"TWENTY YEARS AFTER."

For the past 20 years we have been selling and Servicing Ford Cars.

We have been gradually adding to our Premises, but they are not yet sufficiently extensive to cope with the ever-increasing demand for the "New Beauty" Models.

In consequence we have decided on a further enlargement of our Chatham Street Showrooms.

During the period of alteration we have made arrangements for the effective display of a complete range of "New Beauty" Models, and also to give the Service Facilities so long a feature of our organisation. Our Repair Service will be totally unaffected by these additions.

TULIP TROUBLES.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Garden Correspondent says:—From some gardens, chiefly old gardens we must say, where Tulips have been permanently established for years, come reports of the attacks of a mysterious fungoid disease, which takes off the bulbs wholesale. For this trouble Mr. H. E. Richardson's remedy is to soak the bulbs when lifted and cleaned in a solution of a tablespoonful of Condy's fluid to one gallon of soft water, and repeat it every second year. He states that a bulb of the rare Fosteriana, which he has been so successful in propagating and cultivating, overlooked, and left in the solution for a month received no injury. Serious, too, has been the eelworm disease in Daffodils now successfully overcome by a five hours' immersion in hot water at a steady temperature of 110 degrees F.

FEEDING HINTS.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Poultry Correspondent says:—The heat has come at last, so that last week's hints will prove opportune. Change of diet, abundance of shade, plenty of water, thorough cleanliness, sufficient room so as to prevent overcrowding, and effective measures against the inroads of vermin, are the principal points to be observed in summer treatment.

Meat may now be discontinued to birds that have their liberty, and chickens destined for stock should not have too much food of a stimulating nature. On an open range, if there is no overcrowding, a little meat twice a week will be sufficient. Turkey chicks, until they can forage for themselves, may have a little meat every day, and dry bone meal should be mixed with the soft food of all young birds. This prevents leg weakness. Now that dandelions are plentiful give them to all birds, young and old. There is nothing better for growing birds. Nettles are also very beneficial, as they have a cooling effect on the blood. The tops of young nettles is the part used, and they should be boiled and mixed with the soft food twice a week.

Unsatisfactory dealing by any Advertiser in this column should be immediately reported to the Manager of the "Irish Times."

MISSING DIAMOND RING.

ALLEGED THEFT TO SETTLE MONEY DISPUTE.

(BEFORE MR. HANNON.)

Thomas Myler (22), mechanic, Bessborough Parade, Rathmines, and William Tester (28), labourer, Mountpleasant avenue, were charged with the larceny of a three-stone diamond ring, value £50, the property of Mr. Albert Siev, Longwood avenue.

Detective Moran said that Myler, when arrested, said that he took the ring, as he had had a dispute with Mr. Siev about a money matter. He added that had he known that the ring was valuable he would not have touched it. Tester made a statement declaring that Myler took the ring and gave it to his wife.

Mr. Albert Siev said that he saw the ring on the kitchen dresser before the accused men called in regard to the signing of a tenancy document.

The defendants were remanded for a week on substantial bail.

Subsequently a charge of receiving the ring was preferred against Mrs. May Myler, wife of the defendant Thomas Myler.

Detective Moran said that the woman, after denying that she got the ring, said: "I did not think the ring was so valuable. I thought it was a Woolworth's ring." (Laughter.)

A week's remand on bail was ordered.

GLASGOW MAN SENTENCED.

A sentence of six months' imprisonment was imposed on a young man named Charles McKenna, alias McDonnell, of no fixed residence, stated to be a native of Glasgow, who was charged with breaking and entering licensed premises in Lower Mount street.

Mr. Hannon said that the method which the accused man adopted in breaking into the premises was not that of an amateur.

LARCENY CHARGES.

Henry Walsh, Corporation Buildings; James Dixon, Upper Gloucester street, and Thomas Reilly, Foley street, were again remanded on charges of breaking and entering city establishments and stealing clothing, etc.

In the case of Mrs. Ellen Byrne, Granby place, and Mrs. Margaret Dwyer, Jervis street, who were charged with having received some of the stolen goods, the Justice refused informations. Mrs Crowe, Upper Gloucester street, who was similarly charged, was bound to the peace in her own bail.

INFORMATIONS REFUSED.

When Mr. Louis Beatty, Ailesbury road, appeared on remand, charged with causing the death of his wife on the Stillorgan road on Monday last, Mr. Clarke (Chief State Solicitor's Office) said that since the case was before the Court last he had read statements made by a number of witnesses of the occurrence, and had come to the conclusion that there was no case to go before a jury. Accordingly, with the Justice's permission, he proposed to enter a nolle prosequi.

Mr. Hannon refused informations.

GLASS-BREAKING.

A man named Gallagher, of no fixed residence, who was charged with breaking eight panes of glass in the licensed premises of Mrs. Bridget Doran, Marlborough street, on Thursday last, was fined £1 and ordered to pay £1 5s. compensation.

CRUELTY TO A HORSE.

(BEFORE MR. CUSSEN.)

Inspector Burke, of the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, prosecuted Cornelius O'Connor, Lakelands Dairy, Dundrum (owner), and Charles Cunningham (driver) for working a horse while it was suffering from a raw sore on the shoulder on the 17th and 18th May last. On the charge in respect of the 18th May the Justice imposed a fine of £3 and £2 2s. costs on O'Connor, with a week to pay, or, in the alternative, one month's imprisonment. The Probation Act was applied in the case against Cunningham. The charge in respect of cruelty on the 17th May was adjourned to enable O'Connor to be represented by a solicitor.

Mr. Gordon Bradley represented the society.

'BUS DRIVER CHARGED.

(BEFORE MR. HANNON.)

Charles O'Connell, rear of 68 Merrion square, a 'bus driver, was charged with conspiring, with three other men not in custody, to assault William Hutchinson, Rathmines road, an I.O.C. 'bus driver, on the Rathmines road on the 9th inst.

On the application of Mr. Joseph Gleeson, solicitor, for the defence, the case was adjourned.

WOMAN REMANDED.

Two women, Delia Goodwin and Shiela Ryan, of no fixed address, were remanded in custody on a charge of having illegally in their possession at Temple lane a gent's silver lever watch.

Detective-Officer Gordon, who had charge of the prosecution, said that he met the two defendants and they asked him to purchase the watch and he arrested them.

ALLEGED LARCENY.

John S. Sargent, Gardiner's place, and his wife, Rebecca, were remanded for one week on a charge by Guard 125 C with the larceny of blankets, cups and saucers, plates, knives, forks, etc., to the value of 16s. 6d., the property of Mrs. Ellen Brennan.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT COURT.

KNOCKED DOWN BY MOTOR CAR.

WOMAN GETS DECREE FOR £90

(BEFORE JUDGE ROCHE.)

Mrs. Catherine Fitzpatrick, 38 St. Aiden's Park road, Marino, claimed damages from P. J Lavery, clerk, Dalriada House, Howth, for personal injuries and injury to clothing caused, as she alleged, by the negligence of the defendant or his servant in the management of a motor car on the evening of 11th November last at Malahide road.

It was stated that the plaintiff, her husband and a Mrs. Cleary walked down St. Aiden's Park road to Malahide road to get a tram for Dublin; that there was no traffic on the main road with the exception of a donkey cart that passed behind them after they had left the footpath, and that when they reached the tram track on the way across Mrs. Fitzpatrick was struck by the motor car and knocked down.

In the course of the evidence for the plaintiff it was stated that no horn was sounded, and that the defendant admitted that he did not sound his horn. The evening was dark and wet. The plaintiff, among other matters, mentioned that a fur coat which she was wearing, and which cost £100 when it was new about four years ago, was damaged to the extent of about £10. She was in Jervis Street Hospital for nearly a fortnight after the accident, and had to attend the doctor for some time after leaving hospital.

On behalf of the defendant, it was stated that he did not see the plaintiff and her companions on the road on account of the donkey and cart which obscured his vision. The cart pulled up to allow him to pass. He sounded his horn, and had never stated that he did not sound it.

Judge Roche held that the defendant was negligent, and gave a decree for £90, with £6 6s. expenses.

Mr. Joseph Healy (instructed by Mr. J. A. McArevey) appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. P. J. Roe (instructed by Mr. P. F. O'Reilly) for the defendant.

CRUELTY TO A PONY.

Before Mr. L. Price, District Justice, at Bray, Christopher Keogh, Oonagh Lodge, Powerscourt, was charged with cruelty to a pony. Sergeant Molloy said that the pony rushed out of its stable and tried to eat his walking stick. It was frightfully thin, and the woodwork in the stable had been eaten away. The stable was filthy, as if it had not been cleaned for months. There was no sign of food for the pony.

Mr. J. A. Moore, V.S., said that in his opinion the pony had not been given sufficient food. It was a bad case of cruelty.

Mr. Price imposed a fine of 35s. and 30s. costs, and ordered the pony to be handed over to Mr. Olley, Powerscourt.

DUBLIN, GLENDALOUGH, AND KILDARE SYNOD.

DIOCESAN COUNCIL'S REPORT

The annual report of the joint Diocesan Councils of the United Dioceses of Dublin, Glendalough and Kildare, to be submitted at the Joint Synods to be held on the 25th inst., shows that the assets of the united Sees have increased by £1,795 7s. 5d. The annuities chargeable on the commutation capital on 30th April, 1929, were £513 14s. 1d. The capital to credit of the stipend fund stands at £556,481 16s. 3d. The regular stipends (£38,975 4s. 10d.) paid under the financial plan, and payments to rural deans, canons, etc., in the United Dioceses, £1,373 15s., were less than those paid in 1928 by £731 18s. 6d.

The capital to credit of the clergy diocesan superannuation fund on 1st January, 1929, was £23,749 16s. 1d., and the income for the year amounted to £3,165 18s. 10d. A sum of £2,719 3s. 8d. was transferred to the Representative Body as payment, in advance, of assessment under the superannuation scheme; £366 0s. 11d. was paid in augmentation of retiring allowances; £178 19s. 9d. for temporary assistance, and £35 refunded by Representative Church Body in respect of second curate-assistant of St. James's Parish for years 1922-1928 (inclusive); making a total of £3,299 4s. 4d., which is in excess of the income by £133 5s. 6d. This amount has been transferred from capital, which has accordingly been reduced, and now stands at £23,616 10s. 7d. During the year 1929 a sum of £4,662 14s. 3d. was paid by the Representative Body from the clergy superannuation general fund in respect of retiring allowances to clergymen of these dioceses.

POOR PARISHES.

The poor parishes fund, which was originally opened with a view to aiding poor parishes which had delayed entrance to the diocesan plan, was the only fund to which the Diocesan Council could turn when special assistance was called for by poor or thinly-populated parishes or by parishes in adverse circumstances, and the Council appealed earnestly for increased contributions and collections for the fund. The interest on the fund, Representative Body grants, Hall bequest, Darley benefaction, and grant from the Arnott Trustees, amounted to £1,737 0s. 2d. The voluntary contributions received from parishes in 1929 amounted to £120 15s., as compared with £73 3s. 7d. in 1928 and £74 3s. 2d. in 1927.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The report of the Dublin and Glendalough and Kildare Diocesan Board of Education, to be considered by the Joint Synods, states that the Candidate Teachers' Training Fund, which was launched by the Rev. Canon H. Kingsmill Moore, D.D., F.L.S., some six years ago, has issued its final appeal for subscriptions, and the result has been most satisfactory. The total amount subscribed towards the fund up to date is £2,222 2s. 9d This sum, together with whatever amount may be contributed before the accounts are closed, will form the capital, which will be administered in the interests of students in training, who may obtain loans from the fund, repayable within a given period of their appointment to a school.

It is not too much to say that some of the very best of the teachers appointed to Church of Ireland schools within the past few years owe their position to the help given by the fund. Unfortunately, the scope of the fund is limited to the two years in the Training College and the few months of special preparation for entrance.

Much could be done to supply the schools with efficient teachers if the Diocesan Board had sufficient funds at its disposal to assist promising boys and girls during their school days, making it possible for them to continue at school until the time came to enter the Training College.

TRANSPORT FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN.

In the course of his report, the Organising Secretary and Diocesan Inspector said:—"One problem of extreme urgency we have had to face—the transport of the children of isolated Protestant families to schools under our own control. The local circumstances have been personally investigated in each case, and, happily, the Board has been able to help financially the schemes which have been suggested in order to make it possible for our children to be educated at our own schools. The proposed schemes of transport are not yet in their final form, but the number of our children compelled to attend schools under Roman Catholic management is being gradually reduced."

DUBLIN WOOL SALES.

MESSRS. GANLY.

The opening auction of home-grown wools held yesterday at Messrs. Ganly, Sons and Co.'s, warehouses, was attended by a large number of buyers and those interested in the trade from England, Scotland and the Continent, and the home manufacturers. Biddings were brisk throughout the sale for all descriptions, and although the catalogue contained several lots of last season's wool competition was for these no less keen at the new range of values established. To-day's values in comparison with those obtained at the beginning of the 1929 season are down fully thirty per cent. The demand for low cross-bred wool was phenomenal. The show of downs was poor. The following are the quotations:—

	Washed.	Greasy.
Shrops and downs..	12½d. to 13d.	9½d. to 10½d.
Fine-bred	11d. to 12d.	8½d. to 9d.

MESSRS. GAVIN LOW.

Messrs. Gavin Low, Ltd., held their first sale of the season at 50 Prussia street, Dublin, yesterday, when some 130 lots were offered, the quality of which was of the usual high standard. A very large company of both home and cross-Channel buyers attended, and bidding was spirited throughout, resulting in a complete clearance being effected. Prices, as will be seen from the following quotations, were, as was expected, considerably lower than last year. Quotations:—

	Washed.	Unwashed
Shrop	14d. to 10½d. per lb.	9½d.

MESSRS. CRAIGIE BROS.

There was a good attendance of home, cross-Channel and Continental buyers at the opening sale of wool for this season, held at Craigie Bros. premises, Blackhorse lane, Dublin, yesterday. With the exception of a couple of lots with high reserves the whole supply was cashed at the following Washed.

BALLYMENA SHOW.

The Ballymena Show, which will be held on Wednesday next, 18th inst., promises to be one of the most successful yet held under the auspices of the County Antrim Agricultural Society. This annual fixture is the most interesting exhibition of horses, cattle, sheep, swine, goats, dogs, etc., held in Northern Ireland outside Belfast and attracts exhibitors and visitors from all parts of Ireland and also from Great Britain. The total entries received this year are 3,427, an increase of 786 compared with last year. There are increases in all the sections except swine, rabbits, dogs, where there are slight decreases on last year's figures. The entries for the horse jumping, riding and driving are not included in these figures. There will be a very fine display of agricultural machinery and other trade exhibits, and the educational exhibit will be one of the chief features of the show.

MISSING POSTMAN MYSTERY.

BISHOP'S REFERENCES.

References to the disappearance of Laurence Griffin, the Stradbally, County Waterford, postman on Christmas Day, were made by Most Rev. Dr. Hackett, Bishop of Waterford and Lismore, at a Confirmation Service at Ballylaneen Church, near Stradbally.

Dr. Hackett said that what was known as the missing postman mystery had cast a pall of gloom over the entire parish.

"It has gone abroad," he said, "that I have come here to denounce the people in connection with that sad affair. I came not to denounce anybody. Meeting my brother bishops I have to hang my head in shame. The Stradbally mystery is spoken of in far off Australia."

Dr. Hackett added that for some time he had considered seriously the question of whether to visit the parish until the mystery was cleared up, but for the sake of the little children and the venerable parish priest, he had waived his intention of abstention. He appealed to the parishioners to help to clear the matter up.

"Is it possible," he asked, "that, whether the postman is alive or dead, nobody knows anything about him?"

OBITUARY.

VISCOUNT GUILLAMORE.

Viscount Guillamore died yesterday at his seat, Castle Garde, Pallasgreen, Co. Limerick, in his seventieth year. The son of the late Hugh O'Grady, D.L., of Castle Garde, he was the seventh Viscount, succeeding his cousin in the title in 1927. He had a long record of military service, having been engaged in the Nile Campaign, 1884, and the South African War. He retired from the Army in 1901, but returned to serve in the Great War with his old regiment, the Royal Sussex. He was attached later to the Tyneside Irish Battalion of the Northumberland Fusiliers, and also was second in command, Irish Command Dépôt.

The heir to the Viscounty is his cousin, Mr. Richard O'Grady.

DONNYBROOK FAIR.

SUCCESS OF BRITISH LEGION VENTURE.

Donnybrook Fair, favoured as it has been by glorious weather, has met with complete success since it was opened by Lord Holmpatrick in Lord Iveagh's grounds, Dublin, on Thursday. Yesterday the stall-holders were all in optimistic mood as a result of their first day's takings.

There can be no complaint of dearth of useful articles. There is a profusion of flowers and vegetables of all kinds, and supplies can be purchased for the week-end at very moderate prices. The competitions and side-shows generally are first-class, and have been very well appreciated. The ballroom, under the able guidance of Messrs. Young and Strath, Captain Butler, Mrs. Palmer, Miss Lawrence, and Miss Shea, presented a scene of gaiety in the evening, and has been a source of much benefit to the funds.

ELECTORAL "RECORD."

SOUTH AFRICAN PARTY'S ACHIEVEMENT.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

DURBAN, Friday.

The South African Party, which is led by General Smuts, has made a clean sweep of the Natal Provincial Council elections, winning all twenty-five seats. On the old Council they held twenty seats, the Nationalists two, Independents two, and the Labour Party one. This sweeping victory is unique in South African politics.

COMBINED TRAM AND "ZOO" TICKETS.

A new departure of combined travelling and admission to the Zoological Gardens on the Dublin United Tramway system will be introduced shortly. The proposal should prove most attractive to the public at large. The company has made arrangements for the issue, at an early date, of combined return transfer tickets to the Phœnix Park, including admission to the Zoological Gardens, at the following rates:—From any part of the tramway system: Adults 1s., children 8d. From any part of the city within the old boundary: Adults 8d., children 6d. These tickets will be issued by conductors to passengers on all tramway cars.

Special arrangements can be made for large parties on application to the Traffic Manager, at the Company's Office, 59 Upper O'Connell street.

Mr. G. Marshall Harriss, the general manager of the company is issuing special notices regarding the innovation, which is expected to come into operation in the course of a few days.

"GOOD APPEARANCE."

The Dublin public will be interested in the new tailor-valet service station of "Good Appearance," which, as indicated in our advertising columns, has been opened at 15 Leinster street (Nassau street), Dublin, by the well-known Linco Tailor-Valet Service, of 17 Lincoln place. At moderate charges they undertake the care and renovating of your clothes, turning, altering, repairing, cleaning or tailor-pressing them like new. "BADGER'S GREEN."

MR. R. C. SHERIFF'S NEW PLAY.

(FROM OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT.)

At the Prince of Wales's Theatre last night Mr. R. C. Sheriff, the author of the world-famous war play, "Journey's End," produced a new comedy, which, with its quiet and simple humour, its scenes of country life and general simplicity, is the exact opposite of the play which made him famous.

"Badger's Green" is a village threatened, like many others, with a grandiose building scheme which will destroy its beauty, and the author of the scheme, Mr. Butler, is suddenly called into council with Dr. Wetherby, Major Forrester and Mr. Twigg, who respectively are president, captain and secretary of the local cricket club. The team is faced with the danger of defeat. Mr. Trigg, having cut his fingers with his fret-work, is unable to play, and the others sink all differences and invite Mr. Butler to take his place. The play closes in the marquee on the field, and it becomes evident that Mr. Butler is so interested in the game played as it is at Badger's Green, that he drops his building plans and peace and simplicity of the village remain.

Like "Journey's End," it is a man's play; for women have a very small part in this quaint mixture of petty jealousies, hobbies and sport.

Dr. Wetherby, in the hands of Mr. Horace Hodges, is a remarkably fine character sketch, and Mr. Louis Goodrich, as Major Forrester—his opposite—provides a most amusing display of irritability, commonsense and vanity. Mr. Felix Aylmer, as Mr. Butler, was also very good.

The play had a warm welcome, and throughout the evening a constant ripple of laughter showed that the many amusing little speeches were fully appreciated. It is just the play for a summer's evening.

ROUND THE SALEROOMS.

£630 FOR IRISH SUGAR BOWL.

Owing to the Whitsuntide holidays there was a lull in the salerooms during the week. Messrs. Christie, however, had a successful sale of old silver on Thursday, when good prices were realised. The outstanding lot was a plain circular sugar-basin and cover, made by Adam Buck, of Limerick, about 1730, which realised £630, a "record" for such a piece. This was the only Irish item in the lots sent in by the executors of the late Mrs. Rosalind Beardmore.

At the same rooms on Friday next an important sale will take place of pictures by Old Masters, the property of, among others, the Duke of Leeds and the Earl of Cavan, K.P. The catalogue includes fine examples in portraiture by Raeburn, Lawrence, Reynolds, Gainsborough, Hoppner and Burney, whilst Zoffany is represented by a typical group in "The Bradshaw Family." "A Fête Champêtre," by Lancret; "Fox-Hunting," by J. N. Sartorius, and two landscapes by Richard Wilson—"Pembroke Castle" and "Snowdon from Llyn Ogwen" are other items that make appeal.

Messrs. Battersby and Co. are holding a sale at Gibbstown, Navan, which started last Tuesday and will be continued daily until the entire contents of the mansion have been sold. Satisfactory prices have ruled throughout.

RICHMOND ROYAL HORSE SHOW.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

Scores of children were riding at Richmond yesterday. The second day of the Royal Horse Show is regarded as children's day, and the boys and girls had four classes to themselves, with a £100 cup presented by the Corporation of the City of London for the best rider among them. With their well-fitting riding habits and their complete mastery of their mounts, the children looked perfect miniatures of their elders, who had been riding just before them.

Mickie, the grey pony of Miss Peggy Pacey, of Rugby, was given first prize in the event for children of thirteen and under, riding ponies not exceeding 13.2 hands.

In winning the Stern Challenge Cup for Ladies' Hacks for the second year in succession with his bay gelding Lord Slane, Mr. J. V. Rank, Godstone, secured the trophy outright. Kenneth Edwards, of Craven Arms, Shropshire, the smallest competitor, won the silver-mounted hunting crop for the best boy rider in the class for children under thirteen. His pony was Ness Crocus. Kenneth, who is only seven years old, is one of a family of horsemen.

The prize for the best girl rider in the same class went to Miss Nora Walker, of Slough, on Silver Star.

THE MASTER AND THE BOY.

APPRENTICESHIP PROBLEMS.

TECHNICAL CONGRESS DISCUSSION.

FROM OUR REPORTER.
CORK, Friday.

The annual Congress of the Irish Technical Education Association concluded in the Crawford Municipal Technical Institute, Cork, to-day.

Mr. B. P. Bowen, President, presided.

A resolution was passed giving power to the Standing Council to act up to the next annual Congress, notwithstanding any legislative changes in the constitution of the existing technical instruction committees in Saorstat Eireann arising out of the passing of the Vocational Educational Bill.

BOUND APPRENTICES.

Mr. W. Cox, Vice-President, Incorporated British Institute of Certified Carpenters, read a paper on "The Apprenticeship System and Avenues of Improvement." He said that since the beginning of the present century there appeared to have been a reluctance on the part of boys to become bound apprentices, and a similar reluctance on the part of employers to be bothered with them. Apprenticeship was not dead; it only required organising on up-to-date lines. His consultative committee included the most capable men in the building profession who had served their time as apprentices, had been taught in technical schools and were now holding high and responsible positions in their craft. Their unanimous opinion with regard to apprentices, was that the boy who was intended for the building profession should be instructed in a technical school. Much could be learned from the technical school which could not be learned in the workshop, but no technical school could convey to the lad the atmosphere and environment of the workshop. His committee considered that two years in the technical school should count as one year served in the shop, with pay accordingly.

Mr. McMillan (Dublin) said that the master and the boy should be the only contracting parties to an apprenticeship. When they had other parties joined in a contract it frequently happened that the apprenticeship was not fulfilled. In determining the amount to be paid to apprentices the average value of the boy's work for the five years of the apprenticeship should be considered. He would say that an employer got value from a boy when he was in the middle portion of his apprenticeship. The apprentice was a losing element in the first couple of years, and to pay anything from 12s. to 17s. a week in the first year was absolutely uneconomic.

In Dublin, in the engineering trade, a boy who attended the technical classes got credit for two years of his apprenticeship. He did not think that they could pat themselves on the back and say that their schools were overflowing. His own experience was that it was hard to get the boys to attend the technical school. Everybody in his place co-operated to make the scheme a success except the boys; they simply laughed at it. If a boy attended the classes, 75 per cent. of the fees were refunded by the firm, and if he passed the examination all his fees were refunded and he got an addition of a shilling a week to his wages for a year. That was a gift of £2 12s., but little was thought of it. Yet if a boy got a piece of plate value for a couple of pounds there would be a demonstration about it.

UNFAIR TO THE BOY.

Mr. O'Sullivan (Pembroke) said that what he objected to in the apprenticeship system was that it did not give a fair deal to the boy after he had put in his time. It was not fair that, having put in three or four years of his time, a boy should get, perhaps, only 5s. a week, and it was not fair to his parents.

On the motion of the Chairman, seconded by Mr. Ellis, a vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Cox.

RETAIL DISTRIBUTION.

NEED FOR COURSES IN TECHNICAL TRAINING.

Mr. S. A. Williams, M.A., Principal of the School of Retail Distribution, London, read a paper on the subject of technical education for retail distribution. Technical education in bringing together workers from rival firms would, he said, play its part in developing a spirit of co-operation. It might be asserted with confidence that young people need not avoid retail distribution in the belief that they must sacrifice their ideals. In spite of the growth of the large store, the number of people engaged in the small business was still greatly in excess of those employed in large organisations, and there was a wide field of knowledge and practice common to both large and small organisations. The broad principles of retailing were of general application, and it was quite possible to arrange courses of instruction which would meet the needs of workers in both large and small organisations.

SKILL IN SELLING.

Speaking of the knowledge required for success in retail distribution, Mr. Williams said that skill in selling included ability to display merchandise effectively to the customer, and this required technical knowledge on the part of the salesman. The salesman should have knowledge of the merchandise he sells, knowledge of the customer he meets, and knowledge of the principles and practice of merchandising. Technical knowledge also included acquaintance with the principles and practice of a retail business, with special reference to the work of the department. Retail distribution contained sufficient technical knowledge to make it worth their while to undertake it.

There were two schools of thought as to which was the best method of obtaining this knowledge. One adhered to the traditional method, and maintained that a man best learned his business by practising it under actual conditions of daily employment—by a system of apprenticeship; the other school believed that greater advantage was derived from specific instruction in the art and practice of his occupation. Progressive retailers more and more realised the need of organised technical education for their staffs.

METHODS OF TRAINING.

Several methods of training juniors were in operation. One was pre-employment training, which had several advantages, and although it had but recently been adopted in retail distribution, there was no reason to be doubtful of its success.

Another method of training was for juniors to attend classes in the evening, and still another method was that by which juniors attend courses of instruction during business hours, and this was the method which was recommended by progressive merchants and educationists. It presented practical difficulties, but these difficulties could be overcome in the course of time. For the older people the training would of necessity be confined to evening classes.

Education for retail distribution might be commended as a promising field of work to young teachers. It was almost a virgin field and provided ample opportunity for experience and development. They had assumed that the courses of instruction could best be conducted by the local education authority, but success would in a large measure depend on the co-operation between the trade and the educationists.

Although training for retail distribution was one of the latest recruits to the army of courses in technical education, it was possible to show some results. Training had had the effect of raising retail distribution in the estimation of the world, of parents, of educators, and of young people. Unsuitable candidates had been diverted to other occupations with a minimum waste of time and effort, and the trained people had, on the whole, proved the value of their training by the superior manner in which they had fitted into the organisations they had entered, and by the increased rapidity of their progress.

GROWING EFFICIENCY.

Mr. McGuigan (Dublin) explained what had been done in Dublin in connection with this class of instructon, and said that in the drapery trade they found a growing efficiency, due to the introduction of a better educated boy into that trade. Employers found benefit from such courses, and they had written proof of the ability of boys after the course. Apart altogether from the instructions in commodities and business management, they must realise that the object of the whole thing was the raising of the standard of the business man in his particular trade. That was not a local matter, but a national affair.

Mr. Earles (Belfast) said that the first difficulty was the securing of a suitable teacher. It had been a real difficulty to get people with practical experience to give instructions on the lines mentioned in the paper.

Mr. Morrow (Larne) advised shopkeepers to get rid of old stock at any price, and said that that and the attractive dressing of windows were the most essentials to successful business.

Mr. Davis (Enniscorthy) and Mr. Coakley (Cork) also spoke on the paper.

FUNDAMENTAL POINT.

Dr. Burke maintained that no amount of theorising would do. Their teachers must get into the shops, and there should be cooperation between the teachers and the business people. He believed that in Cork that co-operation would be forthcoming, and where Cork led Dublin would be sure to follow, while Belfast—the most perfect imitator of success that he knew—would imitate them. The fundamental point was to pick their teachers for the work.

Mr. Clampett (Rathmines) said that the organisation of a school of retail distribution was most important If they increased the efficiency of retail distribution, they would increase the efficiency of the whole economic structure of the country.

The cup offered by the Principals' Association for the golf competition in connection with the Congress was presented by Mrs. Kettle to Mr. Lungley, of New Ross; and Mr. O'Neill, of Carlow, the runner-up, was given a consolation prize.

On the motion of Mrs. Kettle, seconded by Mr. Hall (Belfast), a vote of thanks was passed to all who had helped in making the Congress a success.

Mr. Ellis, replying, expressed the hope that they would have the Congress in Cork again.

The proceedings then concluded.

In the evening the delegates visited Blarney Castle and Mills, arrangements for their conveyance being made by the Cork Reception Committee.

BELFAST DROWNING ACCIDENT.

FAMILY'S REQUEST TO DIVING CLUB.

The recent fatal accident in the Belfast Waterworks in which Mr. Erl Calvin, hon. treasurer of the newly-formed Ulster Amateur Diving Club, lost his life during a practice of club members, has had a touching sequel. The members of the club were in doubt as to whether they should continue the organisation, and at a meeting of the club, Mr. R. J. M'Cullagh, who presided, said that he had received a message from the family of the late Mr. Calvin, conveying their united wish that the club should not disband, but rather that their recent sorrow should draw the members together in closer bonds of comradeship. To that end the family desired to present to the club a cup for competition among novices in memory of the late Erl Calvin.

In view of this request, it was decided unanimously to carry on the club and to tender respectful thanks to the Calvin family for their most generous attitude and kindly action.

It was further decided to erect a memorial tablet in one of the city baths, the arrangements for which were left in the hands of the committee.

REMARKABLE ACCIDENT.

IRISH SEAMAN DROWNED.

The circumstances of a somewhat remarkable accident, which resulted in the drowning of an Irish seaman, were related at an inquest at Deptford, London, yesterday on Samuel Dalzell, aged fifty-three, of 79 Bridge street, Newry.

It was stated in evidence that Dalzell was a member of the crew of the steamship Tourmaline, of Glasgow, which on June 7 lay off the Angerstein Wharf, East Greenwich. The vessel had to be moved, and Dalzell and another man were in a small boat under the bows, in order to carry a rope to a buoy. The anchor was raised by a winch and the brake was made fast, when suddenly the anchor slipped and fell on to the boat, which was overturned. Dalzell was struck by the anchor. He sank, and his body was not recovered until four days later. The other man, John McDaid, of Deanery street, Londonderry, was rescued.

Alexander Stewart, of Victoria place, Port Bannatyre, Bute, the chief engineer, said that he could not explain why the brake did not hold, unless a patch of rust had got underneath it.

The jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

CHURCH OF IRELAND.

CASHEL DIOCESAN SYNOD.

DR. MILLER'S VIEWS ON RE-UNION.

The Bishop of Cashel (Right Rev. Dr. Miller) presided at the annual Synod of the Diocese of Cashel and Emly, which was held in Cashel yesterday.

In his address to the Synod Dr. Miller said:—This is an important year in the life of the Anglican communion. The Lambeth Conference will be held next month in London, and of the many important subjects which will come up for consideration the question of Re-union will be amongst the most important. A scheme for the uniting of the Churches in Southern India will be laid before the Conference, and we will pray that the bishops may be guided to such conclusions as will materially advance the work of the Church of Christ throughout the world.

In this country our views are considerably coloured by the problems which confront us. Protestantism has gone down numerically in the Free State during the past few years. So much so that the question is now often asked: whether such extensive organisations are required for the existing number of people? My own feeling is that there is great waste of energy and of money, and if any arrangement could be made by which this energy and money could be directed into more useful channels much lasting good would be done, and the possibility of union on a large scale considerably increased. It is most helpful to learn on the highest authority that the feeling amongst the leading Protestant denominations, especially in the North of Ireland, is one of the very friendliest description. It is right to acknowledge that this is in no small degree due to the brotherly courtesy shown to us, especially by leading divines of the Presbyterian Church.

WHAT CAN BE DONE?

The question, therefore, arises: "What can be done?" Some important men seem to think that there will be a gradual desire for re-union developed, arising out of the growing friendship which is so manifest to-day. It is a comfortable feeling that friendship will develop to such a degree as will destroy all barriers and lead to complete union; but I gravely doubt, in this imperfect world, that such a condition of things has been, or ever will be, brought about automatically. Experience of life seems to point in another direction—viz., that when the mind and conscience of people are convinced that a particular course is not only desirable, but is a spiritual duty, vigorous effort ought to be made to attain to it.

Progress in relation to human life has always been a subject of controversy; but it will be very generally admitted that great reforms have always been the result of hard work. Much time had to be expended upon the cultivation of public feeling before practical schemes were brought to completion. There can be no question to-day that public opinion recognises the advisability of reunion amongst Christians. The Church people in this country believe most firmly that the work of the Church of Christ would be materially assisted thereby, and that men and money would be freed for work abroad. Therefore, the question is being asked now, having regard to this prevailing friendly and convinced feeling—"What about a practical scheme?"

A GREAT STEP FORWARD.

In thinking over the great possibilities ahead, it is evident that much depends upon the opinion to be pronounced upon the Southern India proposals by the Lambeth Conference; but, apart from this, it is evident that a great step forward has been taken. There is implied in the proposals an agreed definition of the word "Reformed," and the want of such agreement has hitherto been the great barrier in the way of reunion. If that definition is endorsed by this great central authority, the way will be open for the settlement of our divisions in this country. We look forward to the future with increased faith, and with the brightest hopes.

SYNOD OF ARDFERT AND AGHADOE.

CHURCHMEN AND THE ELECTIONS.

The Diocesan Synod of Ardfert and Aghadoe met in Tralee yesterday, the Bishop of Limerick (the Right Rev. Dr. H. V. White) presiding.

Addressing the Synod, Dr. White said:—Since our last meeting, death has taken from us two loyal and honoured Churchmen, whose hearts were full of love for this diocese and county. It was my privilege to say, at the funerals of Bishop Orpen and Major MacGillycuddy, words in which I tried to express the affectionate esteem in which both were held by those who knew them in private life, or were their colleagues in those public activities in which they spent the years of their manhood. We may adopt the touching phrase with which Lady Davidson announced the death of her venerated husband: "They have passed into the wider life. God be thanked for their lives here, and there."

Though the Bishop retired from this See nine years ago, he remained almost to the end of his life a useful minister of the Gospel. He understood that the call to the ministry is a life-call; and his years of retirement were not years of inaction, but of much useful service, gratefully accepted by us all. To the close of his life Major MacGillycuddy kept all his posts of usefulness in Church and civic affairs. He will continue to be missed in all these circles, and his older friends and fellow-workers feel that for us no one can ever take his place.

THE TRIENNIAL ELECTIONS.

This is the year of our triennial elections; and throughout the Church, synodsmen, diocesan and general, and nominators, parochial and diocesan, have been, or are soon to be, chosen by their fellows for doing work essential to our well-being. In making their choice of representatives the widest possible discretion has been given to the electors, clerical and lay. It is natural and wise that parishes and dioceses should, as a rule, name for Church offices men known to the electors and conversant with local needs. Nevertheless, the Church almost goes out of its way to make it clear in our Constitution that churchmen living in any part of Ireland are eligible for all these elective posts. Care has been taken that men shall not have vested interests in seats in the Synod or on Boards of nomination. This system of periodical elections gives much strength not only to electors, but to those elected.

When, as usually happens, their Commission is renewed they begin their new term of office with a fresh sense of the honour conferred on them and of their responsibility to the Church for the discharge of sacred duties. In this, as in every other diocese, we recognise much unselfish and efficient devotion to duty shown by our representatives, and we give them brotherly thanks.

PRIESTHOOD.

You will remember that, in the Book of Revelation, the Seer, addressing the Churches to which he was writing, said that all were members of the Kingdom, and "Priests" unto their God and Father; and St. Peter had the same thought in his mind when he spoke of his people as living stones, built up into a spiritual house to be a "holy priesthood." This "holy priesthood" is the great body of the people, made by their baptism members of Christ; and they are not deprived of this priesthood because there are distinctions of order in His Church. That point was brought out by St. Clement, one of the earliest of the Apostolic Fathers, when he said that the laymen are "bound by the layman's ordinances." The clergy and the laity are one body—they share one great priesthood, though to those called to the Ministry certain special functions are assigned.

No Church in Christendom is more firmly built on these apostolic foundations than the Church of Ireland. Here to-day we have bishop, clergy and people meeting as one body, with varying duties, but consulting on equal terms about the interests of the Church of which all are loyal members. And we are all pledged to our service—first in our baptism, and then by our confirmation and admission to Holy Communion. The clergy are, no doubt, specially pledged on entering their life-long service; but the laymen also hold their position and strength in our councils by their no less clear pledges. In this matter the Church has acted with confidence in the loyalty of her members, while making necessary distinctions in the qualifications required for different offices.

Our constitution has its democratic element. Every adult person can become a member of a general vestry on signing a simple declaration that he or she is a member of the Church of Ireland. But when it comes to holding office as a synodsman or nominator to a parish, the man elected further declares that he is a Communicant of the Church. We make no minute inquiries into a man's opinions, for we cherish human freedom, and do not confound unity with rigid uniformity. We not only admit, but rejoice in, the fact that we have varying methods of interpreting our venerable standards of faith. These differences do not cause us serious anxiety, knowing, as we do, that all who take part in our deliberations, or have a voice in selecting our parochial clergy, are not only ready to join us in reciting the Creed, but also to kneel with their fellows at God's Board.

FEW, BUT HOPEFUL.

We have had of late many reminders that we form a small percentage of the Irish people. That patent fact is not, I think, a matter of unqualified rejoicing, even by those who stand apart from our Church life. We claim no monopoly of civic or other virtues; but we believe that we do not stand alone in recognising what solid benefits Irish life has owed, and still owes, to the members of our Church in this our native land. But, few or many, here we are, and here we propose to remain, and try to do our duty to God and man. And if we are few, we are reminded at Whitsuntide that at the great day of Pentecost, after the Lord's Resurrection, the number of the disciples met together with one accord in one place reached only one hundred and twenty. The life of every organisation depends on the faith and energy and hope of a minority; and I remain convinced that a fruitful and prosperous life is before the Church of Ireland in Kerry, as well as elsewhere, if we are faithful to our trust, and follow the light, as God has shown it to us.

EDUCATION OF THE YOUNG.

The reports of the Committees will be presented to you by men competent to explain, in each case, how we stand. I shall not anticipate what they will wish to say, save that I call your most special attention to the question of the education of our children. In this matter we are face to face with grave difficulties, and once again I most urgently call on the people of this diocese to spare no effort in order to secure that our boys and girls in all parts of the diocese shall not only be taught, but trained and guarded in, their faith. It is impossible for the clergy and for the parents to whom God has entrusted His little ones, to give too much labour, time and prayer in their efforts so to bring up the children that they will love, and intelligently serve, the Lord and His Church.

PRIOR PARK COLLEGE.

CENTENARY CELEBRATED.

Prior Park College, Bath, celebrated its centenary last week. Priests and laity from all over England took part in the celebrations, which opened with Pontifical High Mass, at which His Eminence Cardinal Bourne, Archbishop of Westminster, presided.

Prior Park, which derived its name from its lands having been, in the pre-Reformation days, the park of the Benedictine Prior of Bath, was taken over in June, 1830, by Bishop Baines as a seminary and college for the western districts of England. For twenty-five years it was carried on against great financial difficulties, and was eventually closed in 1855. The closing, however, was only of a temporary nature, and in 1857 the Rev. Joseph Hugh Clifford, Bishop of Clofton, bought back the property, and reopened the college, under the presidency of Monsignor Edward Williams. On the death of the latter in 1892, Bishop Clifford, feeling that the financial burden was too great for himself and the diocese to bear, tried to get a religious order to take over the college, but he died in 1893. His successor, Rev. Robert William Brownlow, asked the Irish Christian Brothers to carry on the work of the college as a school for lay boys only. This they did in 1895, and succeeded in raising Prior Park to a satisfactory state. When the school reverted to the diocese in 1902 it was again found that the financial problem could not be solved, and for the second time Prior Park was closed.

It was not until 1921, when it was sold to the Christian Brothers, who are now carrying it on, that Prior Park was once again opened as a college, providing a much-needed secondary school in the diocese. It now holds a prominent place amongst the secondary schools of England.

The Old Boys of the School include Mostyns, Cliffords, Petres, Shatlocks, Coxons, Arundells, Chichesters, Bellews, Segraves, Stourtons, Blounts, Prestons, Eyres, Plunketts, Nugents, Kings, Bowens, Copes, Bunburys, Parfitts—names associated with the best known Catholic families of England and Ireland.

On the occasion of the anniversary of the death of Major William Redmond a wreath of lilies was placed on the entrance gate of the new memorial park which is being constructed in his honour, and flags were flown at half-mast from the grounds of the ex-Service Men's Club.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT POLO MATCH.

INQUEST ON CAPTAIN SCOTT DOUGLAS.

An inquest was held at Westminster yesterday on Captain George Francis Valentine Scott Douglas, of Luckington, Chippenham, Wiltshire, who died at King Edward VII. Hospital from injuries received in a polo competition at Templeton, near Richmond, on Wednesday.

A verdict of accidental death was returned.

Lady Blanche Douglas, whose second bereavement it was, did not attend the inquest.

Her first husband, the sixth Earl of St. Germans, died in 1922 after a fall from his horse at a point-to-point meeting.

Major Edward Gerald French, who was umpire at the match, said his impression was that Captain Scott Douglas's pony slipped when turning. To the best of his belief there was nothing in the nature of a collision.

"A PURE ACCIDENT."

The player was going through the goal, having passed the ball, and was turning to get back into the game.

"I think," said Major French, "he turned too quickly, and the pony slipped up. The pony fell, and the first I saw of it was when the pony was practically down, and Captain Scott Douglas was partly underneath him. The pony was a few seconds before he got up, and then, as far as I could see, he put one of his hind legs in Captain Scott Douglas's face."

Major French added that he stopped the game immediately, and Captain Scott Douglas was attended to. He was unconscious. He was a good rider. The pony had been behaving perfectly properly, and he (Major French) was absolutely convinced that it was a pure accident.

Dr. Louis Neil said that the cause of death was a fracture of the base of the skull.

PAPAL NUNCIO AND THE CATHOLIC TRUTH SOCIETY.

The Papal Nuncio has written to the Catholic Truth Society of Ireland, conveying to the Committee of Management his thanks for the kind reception which was accorded him at Veritas House, when he was agreeably surprised to find how extensive was the work of the society, and how efficiently it is being carried out. He congratulated all concerned in the working of the society.

THE LOUGH FOYLE DISPUTE.

START OF FISHING SEASON.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.
DERRY, Friday.

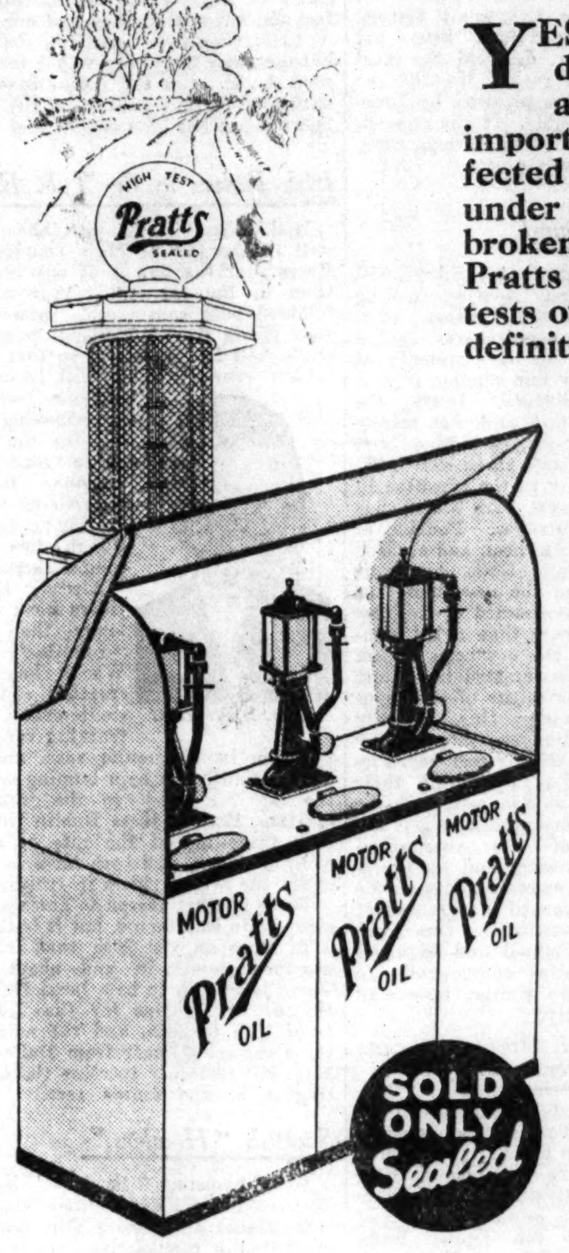
Fishing under licence issued by the Moville Fishery Board will begin on Monday, but it is usual to confine operations at the start to the waters outside Lough Foyle and meet the incoming fish. The disputed waters of the lough will not be worked till about the last week in June, and by then, at the latest, matters must reach a crisis.

A patrol boat belonging to the Foyle and Bann Board, with whom the ownership of the lough is disputed, is at present beached at Quigley's Point (in Free State territory). It usually accompanies the other patrol boats when they come down the lough from Derry. So far, however, it has not done so, although the Northern boats have made several expeditions recently into the disputed fishing grounds. Three of the local men who man this patrol boat have this year refused to act, and it is learned that great difficulty has been experienced in obtaining substitutes. This is the boat which replaced the two destroyed last year, and the Civic Guards have got instructions from their superiors to maintain strict superveillance over it in case it should meet with a similar fate.

James P. Burke (50), a baker, of ARDFINNAN, near Clonmel, was found some days ago near Newcastle in a semi-conscious state on the road, his legs entangled in a bicycle. He was brought to Newcastle Civic Guard Station that night, and on the following morning he was discharged, apparently all right in health. He was seen at Newcastle last Sunday. He was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, Clonmel, on Tuesday, and died there on Thursday morning. The inquest opened by Dr. Stokes and a jury was adjourned for evidence of his movements or condition from 2 p.m. on Sunday till he was removed to hospital. Burke lived at Ardfinnan, but came originally from Cappawhite. He was a very prominent athlete in his younger days, specialising in the hurdles and high jumping. He often cleared six feet. He won many championships and innumerable medals. He defeated T. F. Kirby once in a championship hurdle race, and he accompanied an international athletic team to Rome, where he put up some creditable performance.

IT HAD TO COME

Time brings Progress in everything.
It has brought you better engines,
better tyres, and Pratts High-Test petrol.
Now it brings you a Better Lubricating
Oil than any yet produced . . .



YESTERDAY'S Oils are not good enough to meet to-day's driving conditions. The modern high-revving engine demands an oil with a sturdier heat-resisting body. Pratts—the largest importers of Lubricating Oils in these Islands—have now perfected a Motor Oil that maintains a cushion of cooling oil even under conditions of the fiercest heat—long after ordinary oils have broken down. Blended from the richest crude oils in the world, Pratts Motor Oil is the outcome of exhaustive research and actual tests over 20 million miles of road in all types of engines. It is a definitely superior lubricant to any that has yet been produced.

3 DEFINITE ADVANTAGES OF PRATTS MOTOR OIL

① It gives better "piston-seal," which means no loss in compression or power by gas blowing-by into the crank case.

② It retains its "body" under the fiercest conditions of heat—long after ordinary oils have broken down. This means complete and safe lubrication at all temperatures and engine speeds.

③ It is as clean an oil as it is possible to produce. It reduces carbon, gummed-up valves and fouled plugs, to a minimum.

Your garage man has a chart which specifies the grade of Pratts Oil that was made especially for your engine. Let him drain your crank-case and refill with the recommended grade of Pratts—TO-DAY!

MAYFLY FISHING IN IRELAND.

THE INCONSTANT NYMPH

DAPPING FOR MONSTERS.

(By BERNARD DOBBINS.)

THE feelings with which the big game hunter suddenly faces a magnificent lion or a huge elephant may be counted somewhat akin to those of the angler as he comes face to face with the first Mayfly of the season.

The Mayfly is up, and the big fish are having a carnival. There is frantic overhauling of rods and tackle. There are dreams in retrospect and in anticipation. If you have ever wetted a line in your life, now is your opportunity, now your Duffers' Fortnight, with the trout gone crazy. Good free fishing is very hard to find in England, but good fishing and freedom are the rule in Ireland. Before you pack, come with me for a short try-out on paper on some of the famous Irish lakes, for I can promise you sport to make your knees and hands tremble.

On the Westmeath Lakes, on Loughs Corrib, Mask, Conn, Cullen, on Arrow, Derg, Erne we shall have fast and furious sport with large trout that seldom or never take the fly at other times. And what weighing and packing and sad stories of escapes! There is a euphonious Singhalese proverb—Giya lula loku lula lu—meaning that it is always the big lula (a Ceylon fish) that escapes; and we shall find, strangely enough, that the bad luck of our Eastern brothers follows all our friends too. But do not doubt their tales, for there is a proverbial freemasonry among anglers and you may wish to tell some yourself later on. If you fail to command a hearing, come and whisper them to me, for I am prepared to listen to your wildest, knowing the spirit that inspires them.

THE ART OF DAPPING.

Though dapping is considered a modern sport and associated peculiarly with Ireland, it has been practised in one form or another for a very long time. "The Book of St. Albans," dating from 1450 or thereabouts, makes reference to it; and Walton dapped his fly or grasshopper in the seventeenth century. Dapping with the natural insect did not become popular, however, until the possibilities of the Westmeath Lakes were realised. Now it is a distinct branch of angling, and many a duffer who has never fished before insists on trying his hand. If Johnson had ever described (which he did not) the means of angling as a piece of string with a worm at one end and a fool at the other, such a description might be applied now. Yet successful dapping requires a cool head and a steady hand. A 10lb. trout on a small hook at the end of 20 yards of blow line and a 16 ft. bamboo rod is no joke; and no duffer will land him I assure you, for—gillaroo, ferox, estuarine, fario—they are all the same breed. The novice invariably strikes too soon. Indeed, there should be no strike, but a tightening of the line, for those big fish are very slow. If we miss our fish, our flies are destroyed. If you are fastidious about impaling two natural flies on the hook, the boatman will willingly oblige. He will treat the fly as Walton the frog, tenderly and as if he loved him.

The use of the artificial fly, a cleaner and more sportsmanlike method, to a large extent is superseding the use of the natural insect. With a short rod, heavy line, and hackled imago we are not dependent on the breeze; and on calm evenings—the calmer the better—great execution may be done among the schools of fish roaming about. We must cast well in front of them, with the setting sun in our faces, and remain perfectly quiet and calm. If our fly is refused we gently palm in the line. There is an interesting letter from Lady Howth to Swift, dated August 6, 1736, describing the capture of a 35½lb. trout at Turlaghoan. Why should we not hook one of his descendants just as large as himself, and write a letter about him, too—to the papers? Ireland at present is an angler's Land of Cockaigne, and all things are possible.

THE FLY.

This beautiful insect, the angler's symbol of summer, has a most interesting life history. When the female lays her eggs (about 7,000 in number) they sink to the bottom, and the larvæ hatch out in a few weeks. These burrow in the mud and sand, where they spend two or three years, and at certain times of the year they are a favourite food of the trout and perch. (Though Halford denies this fact, it has been abundantly proved by autopsy.) Then, towards the end of May or in June, the larvæ or nymphs rise to the surface, and the skin covering their wings bursts. On this discarded skin the insect rests for a moment while the wings expand, after which it flies ashore with the wind and sits down to rest under a tree or behind a rock. It is now known as the Green Drake or Subimago, is of a beautiful light greenish-yellow, but is still heavy and awkward on the wing. This is the fly with which we dap. In twenty-four to thirty-six hours it again discards its skin and emerges as an Imago or "Magpie." It is now a perfect insect, with delicate, transparent, black-veined wings. On calm evenings we may sometimes see over the treetops a large cloud of imagos like a swarm of locusts, rising and falling in the air. These are the males at their well-known love dance, waiting for the females to rise. They are not shy as the modern bachelor is reputed to be; indeed, the unfortunate female, on taking flight, is pursued by a whole swarm of these amorous and polygamous fellows. On calm evenings, or when the wind is favourable, the female flies out upon the water to deposit her eggs and then collapses with wings outstretched on the surface. She is now known as the Spent Gnat. Some of the males die on the water, but most of them die on land. The fall of spent gnat generally takes place about sunset, and then is the time to catch your fish, who likes the fly half drowned.

PISCINE JUNKETINGS.

For dapping purposes we collect the subimagos and keep them in a large, well-ventilated box. A few "Jacks" appear early in May; but do not be in a hurry. In a week or two the fish will appear to have gone mad, dashing about in all directions and creating an awful disturbance under water. Now they are feeding on the nymphs rising to the surface, and in a few days they will turn their attention to your winged, floating fly. If the rise is dying out, a shower of rain seems to bring it on again. Trout, however, seem to prefer the spent gnat; and, for a week or so after the rise of fly is over, the male imago does very well. Ephemera Danica is the species.

The Mayfly needs a very pure water supply; for pollution kills it. It has died out on many English streams, and Halford prophesies its total extinction. There is a double rise on Lough Corrib in June and in July.

When the Mayfly is over, the "daddy" soon appears, and, with the grasshopper and the small blue dragon-fly, is dapped extensively on Corrib, Conn, Cullen, and other lakes. On Corrib the "daddy" (locally called "Harry") begins about mid-July and lasts till the end of the season. It is dapped similarly to the Mayfly and is almost as deadly. In the early morning the autumn grass is covered with these insects, and it is well to gather a plentiful supply. A cap makes an excellent weapon. Two flies are put on a small hook, with strong tackle; for the fish run up to ten pounds. This is no easy work; and you must remember that if the trout is educated on the Hampshire chalk streams he is certainly no illiterate here.

CORRIB.

These lakes had made a big reputation long before Corrib or Mask were known. Some very large trout (rather the Esox Lucius than the Salmo Faria species) are caught by "trolling," or trailing. In times gone by, it is said, it was no uncommon thing for one rod in a day to take 100 trout averaging 3lb. Whether that be true, there has certainly been a lamentable falling-off. That greedy wretch, the pike, abounds; and between the black-headed gulls, swallows, and cormorants, the poor Mayfly has a terrible time.

Corrib covers 68 square miles, and offers probably the best all-round free angling in Great Britain and Ireland. It holds salmon, trout, dace, pike, bream, perch, and rudd. Pike have been taken over 40lb., perch run up to 2lb., bream up to 9lb., and 5lb. trout are not unusual. There is a rumour of a 24lb. trout in 1861. There is a later record of one of 16¾lb., and a 13½lb. trout was taken on the dap in 1914.

There are a number of professionals on Corrib, and the angling has deteriorated. It is not such a long time since the cross-line was the general method on Corrib and Mask, and trout were sold for a penny or twopence the pound. When the cross-line was abolished on Mask, it was continued on Corrib in deference to "the trade." However, the improvement that occurred on Mask soon opened the eyes of the professionals on Corrib. These were the good old days, when a sixpenny fine was usual for turning deadly flax water into rivers, and a penny fine was not unusual. Dublin Castle had a warm place in its heart for the poacher. Now the Civic Guards are doing useful work, and the District Justices are imposing some salutary fines. More power to them!

MANY WATERS.

Oughterard is our best station for Corrib, or we may stay in Galway, Dooras, Maam Cross, Clonbur, etc. The Maam end of the lake is the best for coarse fishing. Oughterard River holds trout and grilse. There is excellent duck shooting in this district from the beginning of August. The Corrib River is perhaps the most famous in the country, and the bed of the stream is sometimes literally paved with salmon. Twenty-five have been killed by one rod in a day. The first salmon hatchery on a large scale was started here in 1853, and sea trout run from mid-July. We have here a wide choice of excellent waters—Loughs Corrib, Mask, Boffin, Gara; Rivers Corrib, Clare-Galway, Robe, Black, the Screeve Fishery, etc.

There are boarding houses by the lake, or we may stay in Ballinafad, or in Boyle. The water is almost altogether derived from springs in the limestone. The trout are the heaviest in Ireland, and by picking and choosing with the spent gnat, we may get them from 3lb. up. Peard tells us, in "A Year of Liberty" (1867), that in four successive days' dapping he caught 31 trout, one over 8½lb.

Before, and even during, the rise (which is a little later than elsewhere), if there is not a plentiful supply of Mayfly, we may with advantage try the Olive Dun and its spinner, the blue-winged Dun and spinner, the Claret Dun (Leptophlebia Vespertina), and the famous "Murragh" (Phryganea Grandis), which rises at sunset from a peaty bottom.

LOUGH DERG.

We have here 24 miles of excellent water, which, with the exception of the southern end, lies entirely on limestone rocks. It holds 15 species of fish. Salmon are rare, but pike, unfortunately, are not. Trout in the Mayfly season will average 2lb., and may be caught up to 20lb. Some of the famous dapping bays are Church Island, Stony Island, Twenty Islands, Dromineer, Luska, Castletown, Youghal, Dooras (30½lb. trout trailing), and Terrygloss (13½lb. trout on dap). We may stay at Mountshannon, or, for southern part of lake, at Killaloe; but the most accessible and convenient centre is Dromineer. From here we may fish the lower part of the Nenagh River and ten miles north the Ballyfinboy River, which is very good in Mayfly season.

I think it would do no harm if a fee were charged for the Mayfly fishing. The money might form the nucleus of a protection fund against the poaching in the close season. Once poaching has got a hold anywhere it is very hard to stop it. In spite of the Wild Birds' Protection Act, something ought to be done about the gulls and cormorants here.

LOUGH ERNE.

Lough Erne is 24 miles long, and offers excellent Mayfly fishing. There are gillaroos and trout up to 20lb. Pettigo is our best station for Lower Lough Erne.

While the fish are sulking, we might pay a visit to the historic Island of Devenish, with its 6th century ruins of the Abbey of Molaise, and its 83 feet round tower, the highest and best preserved in the country. We may inspect the ground plan of the Abbey, round which excavations have been carried out by the Government of Northern Ireland. And if the caretaker is present, we may ascend the new spiral staircase of the Tower, from which a magnificent view is to be obtained of the lough and of the neighbourhood of Enniskillen.

KILLARNEY

Were there no fishing here (and there is excellent fishing), a visit would still be well worth while. The average weight of fish on Lough Leane is not large, but trout up to 5lb. have been taken with the Mayfly. In one April day a couple of seasons ago Mr. Roberts killed six dozen trout averaging ¾lb. We have a wide choice of lakes and rivers about Killarney.

Lough Leane, with the great goddess Danu (our Irish Demeter), and her hills overlooking it, is the most beautiful sheet of water in the world. Here the tired city man may find peace and learn the spirit of the mountains, of vast open spaces, of running water, of meadow and moor. He may enjoy soft, misty dawns, and lazy southern noons laden with the scent of a thousand wild flowers, and dewy, hazy evenings, and cool, clear moonlight nights, and woeful tales of monsters lost. Every single day has its own particular place in memory. The sunshine and silence, the flowers, the water and woods are calling. As I write I can feel the scent of the meadows and moors, the clover, the arbutus, and methinks I feel a very ancient and fish-like smell that but adds to anticipations.

The Prince of Wales was awarded two firsts and a second in the cattle classes at Leicester Agricultural Show yesterday.

It is stated that the greater portion of the military stationed in LIMERICK will shortly be transferred to the Southern Headquarters District, Cork, and that the Sarsfield Barracks will be utilised for the training of recruits. It is understood that only about one hundred men will be quartered in Limerick, principally for duty in connection with the Shannon power scheme.

Room For Everyone.

Years ago, on a famous strand in the West of Ireland, where miles of golden sand call invitingly to the children, a small girl held at bay a number of her former playmates, as she laid round her with a wooden spade and refused to allow them to dig. "God made the sand for me," she said complacently; for this was her summing up of recent Scripture teaching, and she drove the astonished children to another part of the strand that, if possible, she would have reserved as well. On the little beach beside the pier at Kingstown the other day one was reminded of that child. The small dog that haunts the place in his frantic desire to see stones being cast into the sea could not bear the fact that some other dogs enjoyed the same sport. Tactful owners took their dogs to another part of the little bay and there threw stones for them. Immediately the small terrier, whose repeated immersions have not sweetened his temper, deserted the most obliging human and rushed towards the other dogs, with whose pleasure he interfered as much as possible. It was remarkable how good-tempered those dogs were, for the provocation was great.

Fairview Playground.

The popular heresy that children will persist in risking their lives by turning streets into playgrounds rather than resort to available open spaces should surely be dissipated by the example of what happens on any fine summer day in the new park at Fairview. During the short heat wave of last week not merely hundreds, but thousands, of mothers and nurses and children were to be seen basking and romping daily in the sunshine in the portion of the new park which has been completed at Fairview. Pouring at certain hours of the afternoon and evening from the crowded areas of the north side of the city, and from the new houses at Marino, into the green sward of the new playground, it was more than a little encouraging to observe the new-born respect with which the visitors treated the young trees and the other amenities of their new playground. Observing this healthy development, one wonders how many children's lives have already been saved by the comparative safety of taking their exercises in the park as compared with the old street habit—to say nothing about the peace of mind of the youngsters' guardians, and the health and happiness of park surroundings as compared with the risks of the traffic-thronged playgrounds of the surrounded congested areas. One hopes that the new City Council and Manager will address themselves energetically to the provision of many similar resorts in various part of the city.

A Neglected Stream.

Visitors to Ireland are impressed by the activities of Tourist Development Associations, but even more by the number of places that seem to cry unheard to be made to yield the harvest of their attractions. As an instance of such a friend of mine puts forward the Upper Bann between Portadown and Lough Neagh. Its surface, which might bear full burdens of boats between winding banks that offer fresh beauties at every curve down to Lough Neagh is as deserted as the Sahara. Even the dwellers about it treat it with the contempt of familiarity, and rarely venture upon its bosom unless some friend filled with enthusiasm for pike cause one of them to put out a reluctant keel. Yet not so long ago that stretch of water was among the important waterways of the country. Cargoes and pleasure boats traversed it; my friend travelled a grass-grown road that leads to an old neglected quay, its piles lost amid rushes. The fact is that the Bann has gone the way of the Shannon and the Dublin canals along which the few barges chug their weary way to show that once they lived. Potomic towns in Ireland, too, seem to forget that there is such a thing as pleasure-rowing.

Wexfordshire.

Reading some seventeenth century records concerning Wexford, I was interested to observe (writes a correspondent) that one chronicler invariably referred to the county as Wexfordshire. At that time many of the inhabitants were English or of English descent, and the addition of "shire" to the name of the county probably pleased the people. At the present day there are numerous English names in Wexford, and many of the old customs and habits, which are still religiously kept up in the rural areas, originated with the English settlers. Mumming is still, for instance, practised during the Christmas season, and some of the songs are very similar to those used by the mummers in the West of England.

Engine Smugglers.

A commercial traveller tells me that some time ago, when crossing the border, he was interested to observe the Free State customs officers subjecting a railway engine which had just arrived from Northern Ireland to a special search. They prodded the coal in the tender with sharp steel sticks. Some of them then crawled under the engine, and, when they emerged, their overalls were covered with grime and oil. I am sure that this is not exactly a pleasant job. However, I suppose it is necessary to perform such detailed inspections in order to prevent smuggling from "foreign" territory.

Hat Pins.

A few days ago a friend who has passed unscathed through the days of "bob" and "shingle," and who does not care greatly for the hats that are pulled down tightly over the tortured ears of the wearer, went into a shop in Dublin and asked casually for two hat-pins. The assistant was frankly amazed, and requested that she should repeat her order. Had the lady said "hat-pins?" The lady had. The assistant was very sorry, but that establishment had not stocked hat-pins for a very long time; perhaps, if Madam tried in such-and-such a house she might find them, but it was doubtful that she should. The shopper went to the other place of business; the result was the same. A needle or an anchor; yes, but a hat-pin was another matter. Madam must go still further. In the next shop there was a gleam of hope; the assistant believed, in fact she knew, that they had one hat-pin. A little shop-worn, perhaps, but still a hat-pin, and the weary seeker took it and went home. Let the ladies take notice; within a certain radius in the city the last hat-pin has been bought and sold.

Irish Riders in the T.T. Races.

Irish riders in the past have done so well in the Isle of Man Tourist Trophy Races that the doings of our representatives in the races this year are being followed with considerable interest. This year riders from almost all parts of the world will be competing, so that the task of our representatives will be unusually difficult. Italy is said to be making a strong bid for the trophies as a part of the national policy of advertising all things Italian; and even Japan has sent a competitor.

MR. S. WOODS.

Already the Irish riders have begun to lower the previous "records." Stanley Woods has been creating considerable excitement in his training runs in preparation for the senior race, and H. G. Tyrrell-Smith has been lopping seconds off the lap "record" in the junior competition. Both of these Dublin riders have been travelling at the rate of about 72 miles an hour, and both have so far been easily the fastest riders in training.

There is every reason to anticipate Irish victories in both events, but it is the Senior T.T. Race on the 20th that is exciting greater interest in and about Dublin. There is certain to be a large Dublin contingent at Douglas for the T.T. Races from 16th to 20th, and the arrangement for a special steamer from Dublin on the 19th will certainly increase the Irish contingent at the senior race.

Scottish "Howlers."

Some amusing "howlers" have been discovered by the examiners of the Scottish Educational Institute in the papers submitted in a competitive examination for junior clerkships in the Glasgow Corporation. Despite the "howlers" the standard was exceptionally high, forty girls and fifty-nine boys obtaining over 75 per cent. of the possible marks.

Some of the "howlers" were:—

The Scottish kings used to live in Hollywood.

James Watt invented the steam-roller.

Britain has been responsible for many damns on the Nile.

The cotton industry is a trade that calls for little brains. It is, therefore, confined to Lancashire.

When spinning was invented all the people flocked to Lancashire, and this is the reason for Goldsmith's "Deserted Village."

To carry with a high hand means to have a grand slam.

In the German paper the sentence "Allah gab ihm die Kraft" was translated "Every one gave him cheese." So advertising does pay!

A Butt Bridge Story.

Among the good stories of the "bad times" of a few years ago in Dublin I have just heard one which is, I think, worth passing along. The first tank had recently arrived in Dublin. Mary and Lizzie, homeward bound from Gardiner street, met it emerging from Beresford place. Whereupon Mary, with appropriate ejaculations, drew Lizzie's attention to the new phenomenon, remarking that it was surely "the quarest thing that had yet happened in these quare times!" Lizzie, having inquired the cause of Mary's surprise, was informed that, in spite of the many strange things that were happening, she "never expected to see Butt Bridge coming up Gardiner street!"

Another Tank Story.

A friend to whom I told this tank story the other day capped it with another. Marching solemnly in front of a tank which was making its way past the College of Surgeons, in Stephen's Green, a typically English subaltern halted the machine to listen to the remonstrances of a beshawled lady of whose persistent advances he was not a little suspicious. I fear he was little reassured as to the lady's friendly intentions when, in a confidential whisper, she issued the warning: "Don't take that thing down Cuffe street, sir! If you do they'll take it aff ye!" Could such things happen anywhere but in Dublin?

How's That?

The visit of the Australian team this summer recalls an amusing incident related of post-war cricket. A certain ever-famous Australian batsman was renowned for disputing all adverse decisions. No catch at the wicket, or case ot l.b.w. was proved against him to his satisfaction. One day during an important fixture the first ball of the opening over cleaned bowled him. As the Australian returned to the pavilion the band in an inspired moment struck up an air from "The Gondoliers." The general amusement was reflected on the face of the incoming batsman as he was greeted by Gilbert's famous dictum: "Of that there is no possible doubt, no possible doubt whatever."

16,000 Miles of Eggs.

The other day a friend who has a weakness for statistics did his best to impress me with the important part which the domestic fowl plays in the economic life of Saorstat Eireann. His learned disquisitions upon "great hundreds" and tons of eggs, I confess, left me cold, and not a little bewildered. But when he demonstrated to me by a simple sum of multiplication of lineal measurements that the Free State farmer supplies John Bull every year with quantities of eggs which, if placed like beads on a string, would stretch over the whole distance recently covered by Miss Amy Johnson, from London to Brisbane, I began for the first time to realise the magnitude and possibilities of the domestic Free State fowl yard. In case any "Diary" reader should be incredulous, as I was, I refer them to the last issue of the Irish Trade Journal, from which it appears that during the twelve months which ended in May, 1927, Free State domestic fowl produced 1,166,000,000 eggs, which, with an average measurement of two inches each, would cover something like 16,000 miles. By way of further information I may add the official estimate that half of this total production finds its way to John Bull's breakast table.

Election Eggs.

This economic computation reminds me of a good story of the late Sir Henry Robinson, who, as Vice-President of the Irish Local Government Board, frequently found himself in mortal combat with the Treasury Remembrancer, whose duty it was to act as watch-dog over British expenditure in Ireland. Having been informed that certain public expenditure on foodstuffs had been increased to meet rising prices in England, Sir Henry followed suit by raising the scale of similar allowances in Ireland. Met by the Treasury Remembrancer with the statement that he had noticed that the price of eggs exhibited in a certain Dublin shop window had not been raised Sir Henry minuted the bland official inquiry whether the Treasury representative had taken the trouble to ascertain 'whether the eggs referred to were intended for dietetic or election purposes?" Needless to say, no further objection to the proposed increase was made. But one wonders what would have happened if Sir Henry had to deal with Mr. Blythe instead of with the official watch-dog of Whitehall!

Leinster House "Terrace."

I notice that within the past few days two garden seats have been placed in front of the main entrance to Leinster House, and the deputies, in the intervals of the debates, have not been slow to avail of them. The seats are placed one on either side of the entrance door, giving the suggestion of a "Government bench" and an "Opposition bench." It is more than a mere suggestion, as a matter of fact, because I noticed yesterday that none but supporters of the Government sat on one bench, while the other supported a Fianna Fail and a Labour deputy. It occurred to me that the placing of the benches in their present position, whoever was responsible for it, is really the beginning of an effort to provide some such accommodaton as the terrace of the House of Commons affords to members at St. Stephen's and their friends in fine weather. But why is not the spacious and more secluded lawn at the rear of Leinster House utilised for this purpose? Next year, perhaps, things will have moved a stage or two further, and we may have the spectacle of people peering through the railings in Merrion square at our legislators and their friends enjoying "tea on the terrace."

Trams.

I was talking yesterday to an Englishman on his first visit to Dublin. He was very eulogistic in his remarks about our city. As is natural in such conversations, he had an objection to lodge about our transport facilities. He rightly pointed out that considerable delay is caused by a tram which stops when the conductor is on the top deck. This, in the nature of things, occurs frequently, more especially during the "rush hour," and often necessitates a wait of a few minutes while the conductor worms his way slowly through the ascending throng. My friend suggested to me that tram conductors should be provided with whistles as are the London conductors. My own idea is that bells should be fitted on the upper deck of all trams, as is done on the Kingstown line, and that conductors should be exhorted to make full use of these.

QUIDNUNC.

ENJOYABLE DAY AT ISLANDBRIDGE.

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY BOAT CLUB REGATTA.

Favoured by ideal weather conditions yesterday, the opening day of the Dublin University Boat Club Regatta at Island Bridge proved one of the most successful held by the club for many years. The various improvements in the grounds were greatly appreciated by the visitors, and the ample supply of seats lining the tow-path made it possible to enjoy the racing in a luxurious manner, while good vantage points were early secured on the rising ground near the finishing point.

The heat of the sun was tempered by a slight breeze, and the river and picturesque surroundings looked delightful.

Unless the weather prophets are mistaken, another perfect day is promised for to-day, and the attendance is expected to be extremely large.

Two people were lonely at the regatta. One was a Boy Scout and the other might have been an oarsman or an airman; for his attire gave no indication of his athletic or other pursuits. They were working the signals, marooned on a thin strip of board, which lurched dangerously near the shimmering waters of the Liffey beneath. Surrounded by water, which invited one to revel in its caresses, the two exiles marched up and down, like policemen on regular beat, and grinned at the folk who lazed on the grassy, sun-washed mounds on the boathouse side. It was not until they had spent several sunny hours in hoisting signals, and shouting to a young announcer, who, armed with a megaphone, called repeatedly for a "spot of bell-ringing," that they were taken off their solitary perch by a man in a hydroplane. This was one of the lighter incidents in a thoroughly enjoyable afternoon, spent in shade and sunshine.

The appeal of the Island Bridge course is most pronounced on the second, or final, day of the regatta, and, thus, the number of people who gathered along the banks yesterday was small, and, perhaps, not equal to that of other years. There were several interesting rowing tests, and one, in particular, may serve as a useful indication of next year's resting place of the Irish Rowing Union Cup, to be rowed for over the beautiful Boyne course on Wednesday and Thursday next. Drogheda Senior Eight crew had an easy win by two lengths from the Lady Elizabeth crew in Heat A for the University Grand Challenge Cup, held by Dublin University Boat Club, and the final to-day should be of unusual interest.

Drogheda and Dublin University each won three heats in yesterdays' programme, which lacked interest somewhat by the "scratching" of the Dublin Rowing Club crew at the last moment. Dundalk, Lady Elizabeth, Belfast Commercial, Cork Harbour and Dolphin crews won one heat apiece.

Among those noticed yesterday were:—Mr. W. de C. Millar (Vice-President, D.U.B.C.), Mr. M. V. Rowan (Hon. Secretary, I.A.R.U.), Mr. and Mrs. T W. Franks, Miss Franks, Mr. Edwin Solomons, Miss Solomons, Mr. D. J. Gargan, Mrs. Carter, Mr. W. S. J. Carter (Captain, D.U.B.C.), Major and Mrs. Denroche, Mr. O. W. McCutcheon, Mr. and Mrs. Gibbon, Mr. J. M. Gibbon, Mr. M. Gibbon, Captain G. C. Valentine, Dr. R. Elsworth Steen, Miss Steen, Dr. L. Claude Purser, Mr. Burke, Mrs. G. Brett, Mrs. T. G. Wallis, Mr. and Mrs. C. Harvey, Mr. and Mrs. McCullagh, Lady Musgrave, Mr. M. J. Hogan (Hon. Secretary, Trinity Week), Professor Henry, Miss McKay, Mrs. Lowe, Mr. J. Merescaux, Canon and Mrs. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. O'Neil, Miss Haughton, Miss Wild, Mr. H. Watson, Mr. J. G. H. Brett (Hon. Secretary, D.U.B.C. Regatta Committee), Miss Armstrong, Mr. Maguire, Mr. R. J. F. Mayston, the Misses Drumgoole, Mr. Franklin, Mr J. W. Craig, Miss Fisher, Miss Jerry Stewart, Miss French, the Misses Nixon, Mr. L. K. Branigan and Mr. J. T. Robinson.

J. M. SYNGE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—The present whereabouts of Synge's manuscript of "The Playboy" is noted in a current Press report. I happened to be in New York at the time when the library of the late Mr. John Quinn, of Chicago, was sold at public auction. The Synge manuscript was one of the items in the collection. The bids—there were only three or four—started at £20, and were quickly advanced to £160, which was the final sale price, if my recollection is correct. It was a matter for general regret that among the few interested Irishmen in New York that this valuable handwork of such a genius was still game for commercial speculators. It belongs to Ireland, and let us hope that in its wanderings it may eventually find its way back to the city where its gifted author found his public, and where his personality and work will ever remain an inspiration and a standard in the development of all that is best in Irish dramatic literature.—Yours, etc.,

T. FLYNN,

THE MARROWFAT TWINS.

(BY A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

The second day of the Boat Club's annual regatta at Islandbridge this afternoon will mark the end of the most successful Trinity Week since the war, and the Committee, with its energetic Secretary, Mr. Michael Hogan, is to be congratulated on the results of its labours. All the week the Royal Blue flag of Trinity College has been floating over the University Club in Stephen's Green, which has been crowded by Trinity men from all over Ireland. A never-ending stream of doctors, lawyers and clerics flowed through its dignified portals. Bishops, whose gaitered legs have long been strangers to running shorts, have strolled beneath the trees in the College Park, or attempted to identify their own fresh young faces in the faded photographs of whiskered cricket teams which hang in the pavilion.

THE COLLEGE RACES.

The College Races on Wednesday were, as always, the most popular feature. The sun shone, pistols exploded and the undergraduate betook himself to blazer and flannels, or top hat and morning coat. The women students turned out in force, and in long graceful frocks, and ate strawberries and cream in every room in Trinity. Through the open windows round the courts floated the strains of many score of gramaphones, the loud tinkle of teacups and the subdued trinkle of feminine laughter. There was only one tragedy to mar the proceedings, when a very elegant gentleman, propping himself languidly up with an umbrella, discovered the article to be a broken reed.

There were not a few family parties in the Park on Wednesday, but none so noticeable as the Craigs'. Sir James Craig, who is one of the Trinity members in the Dail, stood with the elect out on the bright green turf, while the twins, W. J. and J. W. Craig, won the mile and three-mile events. But which won nobody will ever know, for it is impossible to tell them apart. They seem to enjoy their conspiracy of confusion, and dress exactly alike, and are sometimes known as the "marrowfat" twins, because they are as alike as two peas.

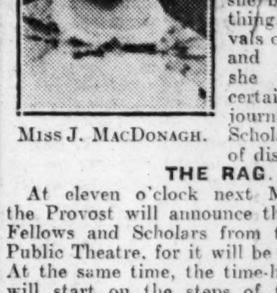
AT THE "CEILIDHE."

The Week started well, the cricket match with the British Civil Service Crusaders resulting in a favourable draw, in which W. G. R. Loughery, the Trinity captain, got the first century of the season. On Tuesday night there was swimming at the Iveagh Baths, after which those of the spectators who escaped with dry clothes betook themselves to the "Ceilidhe." The "Ceilidhe" was an innovation this year, and among those who attended was Dr. Luce, who recently became a Canon of St. Patrick's Cathedral. Dr. Luce has many varied interests, chief of which is fishing. He received the foreign consuls and the other distinguished visitors at the College Races.

DR. LUCE.

THE ELIZABETHAN DRAMATIC SOCIETY.

The Dublin University Elizabethan Dramatic Society will produce Sheridan's play, "The Critic," at the Peacock Theatre on June 17th, 18th and 19th. The play will be produced by Miss Elizabeth Purser, who has had considerable experience of theatrical production. The Society confines itself to the Elizabethans, but reverses the old order, in that all the parts are taken by women. Miss V. Moore plays the part of Dangle, Miss B. Naish-Gray Sir Fretful Plagiary and Don Ferolo Whiskerandos, and Miss J. MacDonagh that of Tilburina.



MISS J. MACDONAGH.

Miss MacDonagh is one of the most prominent inhabitants of Number Six, where she belongs to everything. In the intervals of reading papers and playing hockey, she contributes to certain widely read journals. She is a Scholar and a linguist of distinction.

THE RAG.

At eleven o'clock next Monday morning the Provost will announce the names of new Fellows and Scholars from the steps of the Public Theatre, for it will be Trinity Monday. At the same time, the time-honoured "rag" will start on the steps of the Dining Hall opposite, affording the staff an opportunity of seeing themselves as others see them. Details of the "rag" have been very carefully kept this year.

On the 24th of June, the last day of Term, the College Historical Society will hold its annual supper. At the ordinary meeting which precedes it the House will decide whether or not it approves of Henry Ford. All honorary members are expected to take part in the debate and the private business which follows. It is hoped to make the final meeting of each session a sort of historical reunion in future.

A NEW GENERAL.

RODE GRAND NATIONAL WINNER IN 1896.

Lieutenant-General Sir D. G. M. Campbell, K.C.B., to be General. Major-General Sir T. G. Matheson, K.C.B., C.M.G., to be Lieutenant-General.

General Sir David Campbell has been General Officer and Commander-in-Chief, Aldershot Command, since 1927. He was formerly a well-known amateur rider, and won the Grand National on the Soarer in 1896, the Grand Military in the same year, and the Irish National Hunt Cup and the Irish Grand Military in 1895.

PORTADOWN is gaily decorated for Linen and Shopping Week, which commenced yesterday. The merchants of the town are making a magnificent display of Ulster and Empire goods. To inaugurate the Week the committee in charge gave a luncheon in the Imperial Hotel, at which Mr. W. A. Mullen presided. The principal speaker was the Rt. Hon. J. W. Andrews, Northern Minister of Labour, who declared the Week open, and expressed the hope that it would be the success it deserved to be. Portadown, he said, were pioneers in this movement. Referring to the unemployment problem, he said that the suggestions made at the recent Socialist Congress in Belfast for solving the unemployment problem were an attempt to mislead the public mind, and were most dangerous, in his opinion, from every standpoint.

QUESTIONS IN THE DAIL.

DUBLIN'S SLUM PROBLEM.

OBSTACLES TO ITS SOLUTION.

BUILDING TRADE'S HIGH WAGES.

In Dail Eireann yesterday Mr. BLYTHE, Minister for Finance, moved the necessary money resolution—which was agreed to—to provide grants for building to the amount of £200,000 under this bill.

On the Committee stage of the Housing Bill, 1930,

Mr. O'KELLY (F.F., Dublin N.) asked the Minister for Local Government if he had any definite idea as to when the tackling of the Dublin slums might be entered upon. The Government policy had been in operation since 1924, and no appreciable difference was observable in the slum position.

Mr. MATTHEWS (Government, Meath) asked the Minister if he could open the Local Loans Fund to rural authorities, and give them an opportunity of borrowing money on long term loan for building houses.

MINISTER ON BUILDERS.

Mr. MULCAHY, Minister for Local Government, said that even though the Local Loans Fund was not open to local authorities they had pen, ink and paper, and they could say at least what rent they would charge for labourers' cottages if the fund were open to them. There was no use talking about providing credit in an important matter like this if the very important aspect of rents was not going to be discussed, and local authorities might very well address themselves to that particular aspect.

He was not prepared at the moment to discuss fully the slum problem in Dublin and elsewhere, but he could assure deputies that that aspect of the general housing problem was receiving the very closest attention from his Department, and from those who were responsible for the conduct of affairs in Dublin. Building was one of their main industries, but the complaint was made that it paid higher wages than it ought to pay. Nevertheless, the employés in that industry were not expected to pay the full economic price of houses suitable for them, and built by the industry that they lived by. If the building industry was not able to do that in respect of its own employés, who were stated to be highly paid, he was not prepared to come forward and say, "Here is a solution of the slum problem." The Government were dealing with the housing situation in a way that appeared to them to make a useful contribution to the provision of houses, and that in a way that would help the building industry to get on its feet.

AN OPEN SORE.

Mr. O'KELLY said that he did not say that that House or the Minister were responsible for the slum area. It was not a problem of their time, but it was an open sore, and, instead of anything being done to improve matters, they were going from bad to worse. He believed that with proper organisation, and building on a large scale, houses could be erected which could be let at an economic rent.

Mr. BYRNE (Govt., Dublin N.) said that he would like to see a different type of house erected—a type like that built in Leeds, the rent of which the working man could pay. He suggested that the new Corporation, when elected, should tackle the housing question and build a cheaper type of house.

Major WOLFE (Govt., Kildare) said that, considering their finances, the question had been dealt with so far very well by the Government, though there still remained the very bad slum question throughout the country. It was not a matter that could be dealt with by a wave of the wand.

Mr. DE VALERA (F.F., Clare) asked if the Minister was satisfied that in the present conditions it was not possible to build houses at economic rents. Was the Minister's position simply that because he could not at the moment get a solution which would be completely and absolutely satisfactory, he was going to sit down and leave the problem unsettled. The position of Fianna Fail was that they believed that with a proper attempt to organise this as a national matter, the cost of building could be reduced to the point at which the difference between the economic rent and the rent that could be paid would be brought down from the position estimated by the Minister.

MR. DE VALERA'S SUGGESTIONS.

His own belief was that this ought to be solved at any cost, and the moment that they considered costs and loan it became obvious that one of the principal features was the period of time for which loans should be given. They should extend the loan for a period of sixty years—the lifetime of an ordinary house—and so enable the repayment of principal to be cut down.

Was this not a case in which the credit of the State ought to be used for borrowing? Fianna Fail were prepared to give every assistance in its solution. They did not want to make it a party question at all. It was the duty of all parties to assist in finding a remedy, but it was the immediate duty of the Ministry in office at the moment to bring forward some scheme.

Dr. HENNESSY (Govt., Dublin, S.) said that the suggestions of Deputy de Valera were, as usual, very indefinite, but the Deputy committed himself to nothing. He could not see how the builders were altogether at fault. In recent years some efficient builders had gone bankrupt. Therefore it could not be all profit for the builders.

He would not like to see the labourers' wages reduced in order to contribute to an economic house, but he would like to see the output a little more, especially in a certain class of house—that was the house for the very poor, for there would be always a section of the community in all circumstances unable to pay an economic rent. With financial conditions improving, he thought the Government might make a special effort to bear a little of the loss on these houses.

QUESTION OF ECONOMIC RENTS.

Mr. MULCAHY said that the Dail appeared to accept completely the point of view that the agricultural industry and urban industries were in such a condition that the wages paid would not permit of the payment of an economic rent, and with the resources of the country so indicated, the Government was asked to solve a big slum problem, as well as solving a problem involved in providing houses for the workers in urban and rural areas. The solution suggested by Deputy Lemass and Deputy O'Kelly was to scrap the present organisation of the building industry and have that industry carried on by the State.

Mr. DE VALERA—If no other arrangement can be made.

Mr. MULCAHY—We are told that it is a State matter, that it is non-party, and that, therefore, we ought not, in reason, to expect any contribution in thought on the matter except from the Government Front Bench.

Continuing, he said that he did not accept the view that urban industries or the agricultural industry were in such condition that they could not pay wages sufficient to allow workers to pay an economic rent.

Mr. GOOD (Independent, Dublin County)—I ask Mr. de Valera is it fair that the building workers, in view of the housing situation, should demand in Dublin the highest wage in Europe?

Mr. DE VALERA—I have not gone into that problem.

Mr. GOOD—The deputy should confine his attention to that. It is at the bottom of this question.

Mr. DE VALERA said that what he would do would be to get the building trade and the labourers together, and see what could be done, but it was for the Government to bring them together.

STATE AID MUST CEASE SOMETIME.

Mr. MULCAHY said that the Housing Board suggested by Mr. Lemass on the previous day could not solve the situation. They had to make up their minds that the State could not give assistance indefinitely in the provision of houses for the normal worker; if it did that it would soon come to the end of its financial resources. The State was doing what it thought was the right thing at the moment with its limited financial resources, with the type of housing want that existed, and with the position of the building industry as it was. It was applying itself in a practical way to the situation, and making a not inconsiderable amount of progress. The Dublin City Commissioners had in progress and built, one way or another, 4,644 houses since 1923, as against 2,251 since the Housing of the Working Classes Act was passed in 1922. It was the building industry and not the State that should build houses. He was quite satisfied that the Government was doing all it could in the matter.

Mr. DE VALERA said that they had got into a vicious circle in this whole matter. If the building trade and their labourers were not able to settle their differences then it was the duty of the Minister to step in and see what could be done.

The bill passed through Committee, and, on the report stage,

Mr. COBURN (N.L., Louth) asked the Minister if he was convinced that such a thing as restriction of output existed in the City of Dublin. It did not exist in his constituency.

The question was not replied to.

The bill passed.

OTHER BILLS PASSED.

On the motion that the Electricity (Supply) (Amendment) Bill, 1930, finally pass,

Mr. de VALERA (F.F., Clare) again raised the question of losses to Clare Co. Council by reason of loss of rates on buildings and on land acquired.

Mr. McGILLIGAN, Minister for Industry and Commerce, said that he had followed the principle of Local Government law in giving remission of rates on new buildings. There would be a new Shannon scheme, and there would be innumerable opportunities of revising financial arrangements of this nature.

Mr. de VALERA then raised the question of the compensation to fishermen, and the Minister replied that he could not admit the claim.

The bill passed through its remaining stages.

The following bills also were passed:—

Finance Bill.
Labourers Bill.
Local Government (Amendment).

On the motion for the second reading of the Trade Loans (Guarantee) Bill,

Mr McGILLIGAN explained that its object was to extend for another year the time for making loans, as he understood that some applications were pending.

The bill passed all its stages.

The House adjourned until 3 p.m. on Wednesday, 18th inst.

TWO QUEENS MEET.

HARMONY RESTORED.

The Dowager Queen Marie to-day paid a long call to Queen Helen, who was prevented by illness from meeting her mother-in-law upon her arrival last night. The meeting is reported to have restored complete harmony in the Royal Family. All members of the Royal Family will dine to-night at the Cotroceni Palace.

LIBERAL ATTITUDE DEFINED.

POLICY OF "WAIT AND SEE."

An explanation of the Rumanian Liberals' manifesto of five days ago, in which they refused to identify themselves with the new régime, and repudiated any responsibility for it, was given to foreign newspaper representatives to-day by M. Duca, who served as Foreign Minister in successive Liberal Governments. The Party, he said, could not have taken any other attitude without being false to its past. They had no intention of pushing their disapproval to the point of civil war, their attitude being one of "wait and see." The members of the party were Rumanians first and Liberals afterwards, and they would welcome any indication that the new system was turning out for the welfare and consolidation of the country.

They regretted the attitude of M. George Bratianu, son of the late M. Jonel Bratianu, who had refused to accept the manifesto. The local Liberal organisations were remaining loyal to the party.

M. Duca said that by policy and temperament he favoured conciliation. He would use his influence in opposing any active hostility to the new regime. The Liberal attitude would be one of expectant aloofness.

Asked if that aloofness would be a benevolent one, he said: "It will be patriotic aloofness."

ULSTER AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

PLANS TO INCREASE MEMBERSHIP.

The Royal Ulster Agricultural Society has only about a quarter of the membership of the Royal Dublin Society, and a concerted effort is being made to increase the members attached to the Northern organisation and stimulate an interest in agricultural development.

At a meeting of the Council of the Royal Ulster Agricultural Society yesterday a large increase in membership was announced.

Senator Hill Dickson, J.P., presided in the absence of the President, Right Hon. J. Milne Barbour, D.L.

Among matters mentioned in the report of the Finance Committee, which was passed, was a reference to the efforts being made to increase the membership, and it was pointed out that the new scheme provided that any member who secured twenty new members would be made a life member of the Society without further payment.

IRISH AUCTIONEERS.

ELECTION OF NEW MEMBERS.

A meeting of the Council of the Irish Auctioneers' Society was held in the Association's offices in Dublin on Wednesday last, Mr. Wm. P. Smith, Navan, presiding.

A draft of the Protection Bill prepared by counsel was considered, and referred to the Parliamentary Committee.

The following new members were elected: Edward Cline, Strokestown; John J. Collins, Castlebar; Thomas F. Durcan, Castlebar; Joseph O'Shaughnessy (W. H. O'Brien and Co.), Ballyhahill; J. A. Stuart, Manorhamilton; Joseph A. Mellett, Swinford; R. W. Crowe, Mohill; John Gildea, Carrick-on-Shannon; Andrew Mooney, Drumshambo; Terence J. Dolan, Ballinamore; John D. Rooney, Manorhamilton; John Carroll, Sligo; D. S. Duignan, Carrick-on-Shannon; Joseph A. Mulligan, Charlestown.

It was decided to continue the Year Book and Diary for the year 1931, and arrangements were made accordingly.

The question of mock auctions was again considered, and it is now understood that no such auctions are being held in Dublin at present.

OBERAMMERGAU.

THE PASSION PLAY AND ITS BACKGROUND.

(By AN EYE-WITNESS)

SHORTLY after we had left Munich on Saturday afternoon, our packed train reached the exquisite Starnberg lake with its background of snow mountains—the lake where that mad king of Bavaria, who would listen to "Tristan" twice in one night, drowned himself. It was not long before we felt the atmosphere of the famous village and its more famous play. Nature, luxuriant, welcomed us with blossom and foliage; and when the little village, with its large theatre, came into sight through the misty rain, we were met on the platform by bearded inhabitants willing and anxious to convey our luggage to our appointed houses. They welcomed us with that simplicity and sincerity which characterise the peasants of Oberammergau. All was anticipation as I passed along, while a princely figure, to my embarrassment, acted as porter. Later, as I looked out over the sleeping town, lighted by the fitful moonlight of the Bavarian Alps, I thought that the world must have looked thus when it awaited the Passion.

With dawn began the Communion Services, attended from five o'clock to seven by throngs of worshippers. The six o'clock "Missa Cantata" was most impressive.

I entered the auditorium just before eight o'clock. The great hall has been rebuilt for this year's performance, and it is one of the largest theatres in the world. The effect of the slanting hills outside, capped, now with white clouds, now with sweeping rain, and again with sunshine, was magnificent.

THE SCENES.

The tableaux during the play are its most striking feature. Not only are they conceived and executed with great beauty to portray the mystical meanings of the Old Testament prophecies, but—perhaps the most important point of all—they provide a very necessary and welcome relief from the poignant action of the Gospel narrative. The first shows the expulsion of Adam and Eve from Paradise. During the second, "the Adoration of the Cross"—a moving and beautiful scene, the following words are sung:—

"Eternal! hear thy children's stammering prayer;
A child can naught but stammer.
They, who at the Sacrifice assemble,
In holy veneration worship Thee."

Then the stage is filled with almost all the seven hundred members of the cast, and amid Hosannas, Christ is seen making his entry into Jerusalem. The new Christus (Alois Lang) is a man of great dignity and personal beauty, and is quite as impressive, according to witnesses, as the actor who played the part in 1910 and 1922. He declaimed the words of denunciation against the profaning of the Temple with majestic wrath and sternness; and his attitude in the closing scene before his judges was most commanding. Very beautiful are the prophetic tableaux that show Tobias taking leave of his mother, and the lamenting bride of the Canticles, while the following scene, depicting the house of Lazarus and Mary's ointment, and the parting of Christ from His mother, was to me, perhaps, the most overwhelming of the play. Exquisite, indeed, was the playing of the Virgin Mary's part by a girl of eighteen, who, for some years, has shown herself an obvious choice for the part, both by reason of her beauty and her delightful voice. Rutz Anne's mother and sisters keep a shop in Oberammergau, and have passed through much poverty.

RESTRAINT AND DIGNITY.

The tableau that preceded the washing of the disciples' feet and the Last Supper represented the Israelites receiving manna in the wilderness. Nowhere more apparent than here was the exquisite dignity of movement and restraint with which the part of Christ was played. During the Supper a distant choir sang:

"Oh, the humbleness! Oh, the love!
See the Saviour kneeling
At the feet of His disciples,
Menial service to perform."

And it sounded as though a chorus of angels sang upon the Alpine slopes outside.

The singularly difficult rôle of Judas was rendered with much dramatic intensity by M. Yindo. The scenes which ful scene wherein Jesus is led away by the close the first part of the play show his awful covenant and the Saviour's agony in Gethsemane. Although the solemnity of this latter scene renders its adequate performance well-nigh impossible on the stage, the acting of Alois Lang and his companions was almost unbearable in its reverent intensity. Then came the mournsoldiers, and the first part was ended.

After an interval of two hours we came back to witness the trial before the Sanhedrim, and the grim beginning of Judas's remorse. As the proceedings continue, scene after scene lays bare the council's self-righteousness and the gradual weakening of Pilate. Swayed by the brutal shouts of the crowd, effective as the terrible harmonies with which Bach portrays their thirst for blood, he yields them Barabbas. Very noble is the seething scene where Pilate shows the thorn-crowned Christ to the mob.

AMATEURS.

In "The Way to the Cross" we see Isaac bearing the rood up Mount Moriah. Next, Christ, Himself carrying the Cross, is met by His mother, who leans upon the lovely Magdalene. Rain poured in torrents while the Crucifixion was enacted in stark reality. Sublimely, the seven words are spoken, and the mother receives the sacred body.

The resurrection is beyond representation; yet at Oberammergau its simplicity is strangely impressive. First the Christ appears to Magdalene, and, second, is seen wearing the sacred wounds borne upon the clouds amid the ringing Hallelujahs of the angel choir.

It is strange to see the players at their ordinary work next day—I obtained the Magdalene's autograph in her mother's shop—and I could not doubt that the Ascension Collect has a special meaning for them; for surely they "in heart and mind thither ascend and with Him continually dwell."

A.S.

THREE MACDONALDS AT INVERNESS.

FREEDOM OF THE BOROUGH.

Inverness yesterday conferred the freedom of the Royal Burgh on Mr. Ramsay Macdonald (Prime Minister), Mr. Stanley Baldwin, whose mother was a Macdonald, and Sir Murdoch MacDonald, M.P. for Inverness-shire, the distinguished engineer.

Mr. Ramsay Macdonald, in replying, said—This is the first time in the history of Inverness that the representatives of law and order have summoned three Macdonalds for peaceful purposes; when it was done before, I am not sure how far off the hangman was. (Laughter.)

Mr. Baldwin described himself as one of the children of the dispersion. His mother's people, he said, had been out with the '45, and had been driven from their homes by the British Government. Highlanders had been to the forefront in exploration. What of the future? How were we to keep people on their native soil? It was hard to see how those virtues which men associated with the soil in the Highlands and in England could remain under the terrific pressure of the industrial system of Great Britain, under the pull of the town, the crowds, the football matches, the "movies," and all the paraphernalia which, for want of a better word, we called civilisation. But whether they were able to remain or were dispersed, they would always take with them the genius of their race. The greatest peril of our age was materialism, and you could not graft materialism on to a Celt.

LAWN TENNIS.

THE WIGHTMAN CUP.

ENGLAND IN THE LEAD.

England led America by two rubbers to one at the end of the first day's play in the Wightman Cup contest at Wimbledon yesterday. Mrs. Wills Moody, making her first appearance of the season on an English court, overwhelmed Miss Joan Fry, but Mrs. Holcroft-Watson repeated her success of last year over Miss Helen Jacobs, although this time it took her three sets. Miss Harvey and Miss Joan Fry defeated Miss Edith Cross and Miss Sarah Palfrey in the Doubles, and thus gave England the advantage. Mrs. Moody was not at her best, but she was good enough to win. She won the only two love games of the match—the sixth in the first set and the sixth in the second, the latter against the service; but she served five double faults and allowed Miss Fry to take the third game of the second set, although she held vantage point three times.

Miss Fry did not hold the lead once throughout the match, and it is a remarkable fact that the two games she won were against the service. Mrs. Watson, the most determined base-liner in the game yesterday, gave the impression that she was not going to beat Miss Jacobs when, in the third set, the American girl pulled up from 1-4 to 4-all. But the English player took her own service game for 5-4, and went out on her opponent's service in the next game. Miss Harvey's volleying laid the foundation of the English success in the Doubles. The Americans were out of touch with one another. Miss Harvey and Miss Fry were led by 3-1 in the final set, but made a splendid recovery to win the set and match. Details:—

Singles—Mrs. Wills Moody (U.S.A.) beat Miss Joan Fry (England)—6-1, 6-1; Mrs. Holcroft Watson (England) beat Miss Helen Jacobs (U.S.A.)—2-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Doubles—Miss Joan Fry and Miss E. H. Harvey England) beat Miss E. Cross and Miss S. Palfrey (U.S.A.)—2-6, 6-2, 6-4.

GREYHOUND RACING.

HAROLD'S CROSS PARK.

The third heat of the Open Sweepstake provided a most exciting finish last night at Harold's Cross Park. ATHLETICS AND CYCLING.

THE DRAPERS' SPORTS.

TO-DAY'S MEETING AT CROKE PARK.

Twenty-five events comprise the programme for the Drapers' Sports, which will be held to-day under the auspices of the C. J. Kickham Athletic Club at Croke Park, beginning at 2.30. For the athletic events there is a thoroughly representative entry, and, after a long absence from the track here, the cyclists will again be seen out, the track having been reconstructed at considerable expense.

The McGuire Cup, which Mr. J. F. McGuire, managing director of Clery and Co., Ltd., presented for the 100 yards handicap, should be productive of exceptionally keen competition. A number of city firms and their staffs have presented valuable and useful prizes, and several cross-Channel firms have likewise co-operated in the effort to ensure the success of the sports by making them most attractive for competitors.

NEW ENGLISH POLE JUMP RECORD.

L. Bond set up a new English record in the pole vault, with 12 feet 6 inches in the meeting of the Amateur Athletic Association team and Cambridge University at Fenner's Ground, Cambridge, yesterday. He beat the previous figure by 9 inches. The A.A.A. won with a total of 78 points against 40.

THE STRIKE OF 'BUSMEN.

PROPOSAL TO INCREASE PAY.

Addressing a mass meeting of Waterford railwaymen, Mr. H. Triplett, Organising Secretary, said that it might be necessary to extend the scope of the 'bus strike before the men achieved victory. He then went on to detail the circumstances which led up to the present strike of 'bus men, and to their organisation by the National Union of Railwaymen. On the other side of the Channel an agreement had been reached with the four big railway companies, who virtually controlled 'bus traffic, and the National Union of Railwaymen only was trying to bring about the same result in Ireland. So far as the present strike was concerned, Limerick and Cork were the weakest points, but they hoped Cork would be in line this week-end.

They proposed, he said, to increase the strikers' pay from 15s. to 24s. per week.

A resolution, pledging financial support and any other method agreed on by the union, was carried with acclamation.

LONGFORD-WESTMEATH POLLS.

WOMAN VOTER'S SUDDEN DEATH.

Polling took place in the Longford-Westmeath constituency yesterday. An old woman voter when on her way to the booth died suddenly, and a motor car, carrying a party of voters, went over a ditch in the Crookedwood district, but none of the occupants of the vehicle was injured. Apart from these happenings, no untoward incident was reported from any part of the constituency.

While it was not possible to give an exact idea of the total poll in County Westmeath, reports received indicate that a large percentage of the electorate voted in the rural districts. In Mullingar, with its three polling stations, about 65 per cent. voted, and at the rural district polling station about 70 per cent.

Counting will commence early to-day, and will not conclude until a late hour to-night.

A large fleet of motor cars were busy throughout the day carrying voters to the different polling stations.

Various devices were resorted to by the different parties to entice votes. One of these in Mullingar for the Labour candidate was a donkey, ridden by a boy. The animal paraded the streets with the legend on the saddle: "Everyone's voting for Duffy except me."

Fianna Fail also had a number of devices to encourage their supporters, while Cumann na nGaedheal motor cars went round bearing the inscription: "Delany is winning four to one."

From Ballinagore polling district, some nine miles from Mullingar, it is reported that a woman of advanced years was being taken to vote in a motor car to the polling station when she became suddenly ill. She was taken to the roadside, where she died.

LIGHTNING STRIKES TROOPS.

COMMANDER KILLED AND OFFICERS INJURED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
LINKOEPING, SWEDEN, Friday.

While a company of machine gunners were doing field training here to-day a violent thunderstorm broke overhead and a flash of lightning struck the marching column.

The captain in command was killed on the spot and two lieutenants, an N.C.O. and four men were burned or temporarily blinded.

UNAUTHORISED V.C. AND D.S.O. RIBBONS.

REMARKABLE CASE AT BIRMINGHAM.

Geoffrey Herman Garrett, of Lordswood, Harborne, was fined £5 and ordered to pay £6 costs at Birmingham yesterday for wearing ribbons of the V.C. and D.S.O., to which he was not entitled.

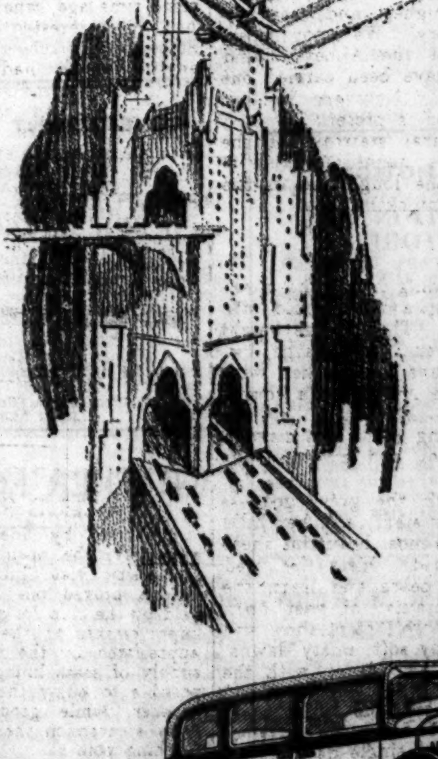
For the prosecution it was stated that the case came to the notice of the authorities through a circular concerning a scheme "for training ex-Service men and their dependents in the art of special craftsmanship in all kinds of metal. Promoter and manager, Captain G. H. Garratt, V.C., D.S.O., O.B.E., M.C., concessionaire for Miller's patents in photography."

Mr. Pugh, who prosecuted, said that there was no reflection on the people connected with the metal concern, who, no doubt, were deceived as to Garratt's decorations. Garratt had received a commission in India in 1919, but was court-martialled and dismissed the Service in 1924, when there were eight charges of embezzlement against him.

Detective-Inspector Richardson said that Garratt appeared to have used the decorations, not for fraudulent purposes, but out of sheer vanity. The metal concern was a genuine affair.

Mr. D. Finnemore, for Garratt, said that he admitted his incredibly foolish conduct, and apparently wanted now to make good in the eyes of his family and friends. He was married only last year, and his wife was going abroad with him, so that he might start afresh.

"CREATORS OF THE MODERN MODE"



Hupmobile's Leadership Among Eight-Cylinder Cars Again Proven By This New Model

Again Hupmobile lives up to its 21-year traditional reputation by advancing all standards of motor car value among eight-cylinder cars. In its 1930 model there is vastly increased power, more brilliant speed and silent, remarkable acceleration—at such an attractive price as to make it no higher than many sixes.

There is vibration-free engine performance, made possible by the Lanchester damper and eight scientifically designed counterweights. There are double-action hydraulic shock absorbers to eliminate all road shocks.

There is luxurious comfort in the deep cushions and body-contoured upholstery; greater head, leg and seat room with arm rests that contribute to perfect riding ease.

And for the first time in motor car history there is a single modern motif of design, predominant throughout, from radiator cap to tail light, inside and outside the car, presenting a single unit of harmonised beauty.

Ride in this new Eight. See for yourself how far Hupmobile has advanced all standards of motor car design, regardless of price.

Britain's Industries.

The announcement by the directors of Messrs. Harland and Wolff that they intend to pass the dividend, due on the company's First Cumulative Preference Shares on July 1st, strikes a gloomy note, which in no way is mitigated by the discouraging statement made by Mr. J. O M. Clarke, Chairman of Messrs. J. and P. Coats, at the annual general meeting of that concern. "I must frankly tell you," he said, "that the general trade outlook for the near future is not promising." The coincidence of these two depressing messages is doubly unfortunate, since not only does it show that two "key" industries are undergoing a bad time, but it tends to alarm the public unduly. Most people ignore company meetings unless they happen to be shareholders, in which case they take a strictly parochial view. Indeed, even directors of large firms often are unable to see silver linings when their own businesses are situated in midst of a cloud. It is a dictum of the Stock Exchange that tops and bottoms are made for fools, and certainly the "punter" who waits for the zenith of a boom, as a rule, sells out finally at the nadir of a "slump." In the field of legitimate investment the position is somewhat different, but, mutatis mutandis, the same saw applies. The herd instinct is predominant among smaller capitalists, with the result that they are prone to forget that annual reports often are nearly a year late, and that the pessimism of the moment is as liable to be unjustified as the previous optimism that caused them originally to buy.

While Mr. Clarke probably has ample ground in the present state of the cotton trade for his Cassandra-like remarks, signs are not wanting that other industries are approaching better days. To-day Germany's heroic effort to combat unemployment has focussed attention on steel, and Sheffield's answer does not lack cheering elements. The Master Cutler and the Chamber of Commerce have proclaimed that the city is employing many thousand more hands than she employed before the war and, in the higher grades of production, has kept pace with all her competitors. On Wednesday a conference will be held in London to discuss whether or not prices ought to be lowered to meet the German challenge. Well-informed opinion, however, does not expect that any reduction will be made, and here we must remember that British manufacturers do not enjoy the Ministerial support of a patriotic ex-trade unionist like Herr Stegerwald. Who can suppose that Miss Bondfield would give the force of law to an arbitration that reduced wages? Nevertheless, in spite of the innumerable handicaps under which British industries are compelled to labour, the steel industry is displaying symptoms of resiliency. In Belfast at a meeting of the Federation of Shipbuilding and Engineering Trades a distinctly hopeful attitude was adopted. Mr. Spiers, the Secretary, referred to a "slow but steady improvement," and we trust that this confidence will be reflected by the Chairman of Messrs. Harland and Wolff at the next general meeting. At least the firm's yards are not idle.

Lately certain people, discouraged by the results of the last few years, have turned their eyes towards American investments. This lure is natural, but is likely, at present prices, to prove a Fata Morgana. Commercially, the two countries are in an almost exact contrast, since the prosperity of the United States is a consequence of the war in much the same degree as Britain's present troubles are due to the same cause. The effects of that convulsion are beginning to pass, and the return to normal in both countries will involve a fiscal process of contrary motion. Already collapses in New York have provided a writing on the wall. Of course, many exceptions will exist, and new political crises always are liable to upset calculations. Indeed, the Free State is as safe a home as can be found for money in Europe at the present time. A strong point, however, in favour of British concerns is the growing realisation among the electorate that "safeguarding" is necessary. Indeed, bolder spirits are beginning to talk openly about "protection," and we may look to see within the next few years, if not earlier, a measure introduced into the House of Commons to make protective tariffs—for "key" industries at least—an accomplished fact. When we consider that such a bill would shed shackles, both actual and psychological, that fetter no other nation, it is not difficult to imagine how great would be the fillip given to industry. This year there may be several other discouraging reports of firms' tradings; but there is reason to think that, in most instances, they will mark a nadir rather than a stage.

Dublin's Housing.

The question of Dublin's housing remains unsatisfied. Yesterday in Dáil Eireann, amid a volley of unusually constructive criticism from the Opposition benches, the committee stage of the Housing Bill, which proposes to give further grants to the amount of £200,000 for the building of houses, was passed. This bill is the latest of a series of measures designed to improve housing conditions in the Free State. As a result of these measures the requisite number of houses has been reduced to 31,000, of which Greater Dublin will require no fewer than 18,000. The Government's efforts to improve the situation have been directed on conventional lines. There has been a notable improvement, but that improvement is by no means so great as measures more expertly directed might have made it. We grant that there are peculiar difficulties in the path of those who attempt to carry out a great social reform. Suitable land is not easy to obtain. A glance at some of the new settlements shows mistakes which are bound to have deplorable consequences. Firstly, far too many houses are built on the available space. The result is ugly, and modern science, reinforcing age-old common sense, teaches that unattractive housing conditions cannot be successful. Secondly, they are too close to the city, and, sooner or later, will form the nucleus of new slums. In the third place, as yesterday's debate revealed, these new settlements have done little or nothing to settle the most imminent aspect of the problem—that of the slums. It is estimated that some 23,655 families in Dublin live in single rooms, and many of these neither wish, nor can afford, to transport themselves to three, four, or five-roomed houses. A reform that will do away with this vast proportion of slums calls for more than the expenditure of money on housing grants; it calls for the co-operation of experts, tactics well-nigh revolutionary and, above all, vision. Dublin is expanding so rapidly that those who wish to establish a permanent reform must look thirty or fifty years ahead. The reformer's task will not be over when the present slums have been cleared; for precautions must be taken that new slums shall not appear to take their place. To this end it is essential that the new dwellings shall not be congregated into close settlements; they must be scattered, and they must be situated as far as possible from the city's centre. Yesterday's debate proved that all parties were anxious to solve the general problem, although they failed to agree on the method. Obviously, a sweeping reform is needed, but there is no prospect of such a reform until the cost of building is reduced.

Kingstown Regatta.

The arrival of Shamrock V. in Kingstown Harbour will be an important event in the history of Irish yachting. It will mark a return to the pre-war glories of Kingstown Regatta, and will give Dublin Bay a proud place among the yachting centres of the world. After the Kingstown Regatta, which takes place on Monday and Tuesday of next week, Shamrock V. will go to Bangor for the Royal Ulster Yacht Club's Regatta, and thence will sail to the Clyde. Thus the people of Dublin will have a chance of seeing this magnificent craft, which, through the splendid sportsmanship of Sir Thomas Lipton, will try once again to wrest the America Cup from the United States. When Shamrock V challenges her American rivals in the Autumn she will sail under the flag of the Royal Ulster Yacht Club; and, therefore, every Irishman will have a personal interest in the race. No man has done so much for yachting as Sir Thomas Lipton. He is now over eighty years of age; yet he is as keen as a man who could be his grandson, and enters into his favourite sport with the zest of a schoolboy. The conditions under which the race for the America Cup is sailed operate heavily against the challenger; for Shamrock V. must sail to the United States under her own canvas, and must be built specially to withstand the Atlantic seas. She represents the last word in yachting design. Already she has shown that she is vastly superior to all her European rivals, and everybody will wish her luck. If she succeeds in winning the America Cup, she will crown the career of her owner with the laurels for which he has striven so worthily, and nobody will applaud his success more sincerely than the Americans, who so often have thwarted his efforts. At the moment the omens are favourable for Kingstown. If the good weather holds, this year's event ought to equal, if it does not surpass, in splendour those memorable regattas of pre-war days. Shamrock's participation will give it an unaccustomed glamour, and the display of yachts in the harbour will bring Kingstown into line with Cowes and the Clyde.

Sir Henry Segrave.

The craze for speed has claimed another victim—this time one of the most distinguished motorists in the world. Yesterday, having broken the existing "record" for speed in a hydroplane, Sir Henry Segrave, with one of his mechanics, was killed on Windermere. How the accident happened is not clear. His speed-boat, Miss England II., was dashing through the water at about 100 miles an hour, when the propeller shaft seems to have snapped. The boat capsized, and its three occupants were hurled into the lake. One of the mechanics was saved; Sir Henry Segrave died shortly after having been taken ashore, and the third member of the crew disappeared. Britain has lost one of her bravest sons, and the whole Empire will mourn the loss of a man who devoted his life to its service. Sir Henry Segrave held the world's "record" for motor-racing on land, and was trying to achieve a like distinction on water when he met his death. We may doubt the value of these speed tests, but we cannot but admire the spirit of those men who risk their lives daily in an effort to do something more quickly than anybody has done it before. How many gallant young men have been lost in the scramble for speed? Kinkhead, Motta, Lee Bible, Parry Thomas—these are but a few names among the many; and yet the machine must be served. Sir Henry Segrave's sad death will not prevent other young men from trying to emulate his achievements. No sooner has one "record" been broken than somebody else attempts to move more rapidly still; and so the mad race continues. Doubtless, mankind will benefit in the long run; but it is difficult to see how this mania for speed can add to the sum of human happiness. Men of the Segrave type are too valuable to sacrifice, and, while we deplore the condition of affairs that makes such accidents possible, we pay homage to the memory of a very gallant gentleman.

LONDON LETTER.

SIR HENRY SEGRAVE.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
FRIDAY NIGHT.

The first news to reach London of the calamity on Lake Windermere did not sound very alarming, but, as other reports followed, the real seriousness became apparent. The news did not come through until some hours later that Sir Henry Segrave was a victim, having sacrificed his life in an effort to maintain the supremacy of Great Britain in a branch of sport not yet known very widely. In his attempts to create a "record" at Windermere, Sir Henry Segrave had met with a great deal of bad luck; for mishaps occurred to the boat on each day when he had it out. On one occasion a sheet of flame shot out from the boat after it had broken the "record" of 92.18 miles an hour in an unofficial trial, and before the attempt was made to-day Sir Henry Segrave remarked that the boat was an absolute experiment and that anything might happen.

Mr. Thomas's Translation.

Mr. J. H. Thomas, who received his seal of office as Dominions Secretary this morning, will move directly from the Treasury to the Colonial Office, which is on the opposite side of Downing street, and he will be accompanied by Mr. Eddie Marsh as private secretary. Mr. Thomas seems quite unable to do without the services of this most accomplished private secretary; for as soon as he was appointed Lord Privy Seal and Minister for Unemployment he requested that Mr. Marsh should become his principal private secretary. Mr. Thomas knew Mr. Marsh well; for they were at the Colonial Office together when Mr. Thomas was Minister five years ago. Mr. Marsh, in turn, has been private secretary to Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Alfred Littce, and served under Mr. Churchill at the Board of Trade, the Home Office, the Admiralty, the Treasury, and the Duchy of Lancaster.

Civil Servants' Salaries.

The British Civil Service estimates are extremely high, and few people will welcome with enthusiasm a proposal which may increase them by something like five millions a year. Yet the claim which would bring about such a development is not quite without justice; for the civil servants ask that they shall no longer be exposed to the uncertain fluctuations of salary caused the present bonus system. Civil Service salaries, in [illegible] have not marched with the general increase, and it has been found on inquiry that the heads of some of the great Government departments are receiving much smaller salaries than the heads of comparatively unimportant businesses. The migration of well-known civil servants to the City is not surprising in the circumstances.

Oil.

The idea that the oil reserves in the United States are likely to be exhausted in a few years, as has been stated more than once by engineers of note, has been refuted in a report by Dr. Gustav Egloff, of the Universal Oil Product Research Laboratories. He says that for every barrel of oil that has been produced at least four barrels remain. While 13,500,000,000 barrels of oil have been produced, 74,000,000,000 or more are still in the oil sands—a sufficient quantity to supply the world's needs for more than fifty years. Similar predictions of impending petroleum exhaustion made in the past have been refuted as operations have been extended. In 1922 it was stated quite positively that the oil reserves in the United States were not over 7,000,000,000 barrels, but since that statement was made more than 7,000,000,000 barrels have been produced, and the present supply is the greatest that ever has been known. Rapid progress has been made in the production of petroleum products and gas with "cracking" processes. This year over 275,000,000,000 cubic feet of gas will be produced by that method, and another 270,000,000,000 from crude oil distillation.

The Transatlantic Telephone.

Great improvements have been effected in the trans-Atlantic telephone service since it was first opened in 1927. Owing to the provision of four speech channels it is no longer necessary for calls to be made considerable periods in advance. A valuable feature is the personal call system, under which the Post Office endeavours to trace the person required, and, where the distant telephone number is not known, uses its own resources to locate the individual. Calls may be made now at the rate of £6 for three minutes to the Eastern States of America and Canada, with additional charges to places further West.

R. A. C. Precautions.

Suggestions have been placed before the Royal Automobile Club to ensure that only men adequately qualified by skill and experience shall compete in important motor car races. The R.A.C. announces that it is not prepared, in the middle of the racing season, to start a hard-and-fast system which might interfere seriously with the organisation of important events included in this year's calendar. Meanwhile it is taking some action. First, it is drawing the attention of promoters of motor races to their responsibilities and powers under the International Sporting Code and the general competition rules of the R.A.C. Secondly, it is setting up a sub-committee of three or four well-known drivers, who have ceased to take an active part in racing, to advise promoters in cases where there is doubt concerning the qualifications of any driver proposing to compete in an event of importance.

An Industrial Revival.

The improvement in the artificial silk industry during the past few weeks now has reached a stage when many of the larger factories are preparing to go into full production. Courtaulds' Halifax factory is working full time, and the Evening Standard says that by the beginning of next week every factory of this particular company will be in full production. Two reasons are given for this activity. One, of course, is the usual seasonal revival of demand, and the other is attributed to removal of the tariff uncertainty. Manufacturers who for many weeks before the Budget refused to take the risk of manufacturing stocks in advance are trying to build up their usual reserves of goods. Some improvement has been evident also in the export trade, particularly during the past two or three weeks.

The School-Leaving Age.

A great many parents among the working classes object to the proposal that the school-leaving age shall be raised to fifteen, and it appears from the discussions at the annual general meeting of the Central Association of Miners' Permanent Relief Societies at the Connaught Rooms to-day that a great number of the miners and their wives are opposed bitterly to the idea. One reason for the objection, I believe, is that many parents fear that boys and girls of fourteen to fifteen will prove too much for them to keep under discipline, and that they will want more in the way of clothes and amusements than any Government allowance will cover.

The Sultan of Morocco is continuing his tour through France, and arrived last Wednesday at Brides-les-Bains, where he will remain for some days. During his brief stay at Monte Carlo he was officially received, and after luncheon at the Hotel de Paris, ascended Mount Agel to the golf links, where he showed much interest in the matches then being played

HOW SIR HENRY SEGRAVE WAS KILLED.

SPEED BOAT CAPSIZES WHILE GOING AT 100 MILES AN HOUR.

MECHANIC DROWNED.

THEORY THAT ACCIDENT WAS CAUSED BY FLOATING OBJECT.

SIR HENRY SEGRAVE, whose home as a boy was at Newtownmountkennedy, holder of the world's land speed "record," met his death yesterday after gaining the world's water "record." His mechanic was drowned and his engineer was severely injured.

Sir Henry Segrave.

The accident occurred on Lake Windermere, where Sir Henry and his companions were putting Miss England II., the £25,000 speed boat, to a severe test. While travelling at a speed of about one hundred miles an hour the boat appeared to shoot into the air, swerve and then capsize. Sir Henry and the engineer, J. Wilcocks, were thrown into the water, and were brought ashore seriously injured. The mechanic, P. Halliwell, was not seen again.

The average speed over two runs reached by Miss England II. was 98.75 miles per hour, which beats the previous highest speed, which was attained by an American.

Misfortune had dogged Sir Henry through his trials on Lake Windermere. On each occasion when he brought out the boat there was a mishap.

On Tuesday, while travelling at high speed, the steel propeller flattened out at the tip of the plate. On Wednesday, when a speed of 101.9 miles per hour was attained, the propeller broke, and on Thursday, when a blade of the propeller broke off and grazed the bottom of the boat, Sir Henry said: "We were very lucky that the blade did not come right through the bottom."

One theory is that the boat struck a small object, possibly a bottle, floating on the surface, and that this caused the accident.

SHOT INTO THE AIR.

BOAT SEEN TO CAPSIZE.

The Press Association's Special Correspondent, telephoning from Lake Windermere last night, gave the following description of the accident:—Britain won her third world's speed "record" to-day, but the price was the life of her greatest racing ace. She lost Sir Henry Segrave. He was piloting Miss England II., the wonder speed boat, which cost £25,000 and included revolutionary designs. He was attempting to win for Britain the world's water speed "record," and, while doing well over one hundred miles an hour, the boat shot into the air, swerved and capsized.

No boat has ever travelled faster, but the result was that Sir Henry Segrave was terribly injured and died a few hours later.

It was one of the most tragic days in the history of speed tests. Miss England II. had a crew of three, Major Sir Henry Segrave, Mr. V. Halliwell, Rolls-Royce mechanic, and Mr. Willcocks. Sir Henry Segrave is dead, Halliwell is drowned, and Wilcocks is injured.

Once again the superstitious have reason to point out that Friday, the thirteenth, is an unlucky day.

THE START.

Miss England II. was taken out at 1.15 p.m. from her shed. Then the small army of mechanics and engineers, tired-eyed and tense, watched her jump away from the jetty. It was a magnificent sight. The 4,000 h.p. engines roared their challenge, the white foam rose high on every side, and Miss England II. sped across the water. At the top of the lake she turned and then the engines roared like thunder. Miss England II. was off for the attempt on the "record." She flashed by the buoys which marked the measured mile at terrific speed and the thousands who lined the shore and filled the many small boats on the lake watched with great excitement.

Again the vessel turned and again she sped across the water from buoy to buoy.

Then came the third speed burst which was to end in accident. The roar of the engines indicated that the boat was going all out, and she flashed up the lake once again.

SHOT INTO AIR.

Then the mishap occurred. While spinning over the water at nearly one hundred miles an hour, and half-way between the measured mile buoys, she shot into the air, came down on to the water again, rocked slightly, seemed to swerve, and then the cloud of foam went up.

People on either side screamed, and some of the women fainted. Then Miss England II. disappeared beneath the foam, and the next that was seen of her was that she had capsized. The bottom, which was badly holed, emerged from the water. Immediately a dozen speed boats went to her. Two of the crew of Miss England II., Sir Henry Segrave and Wilcocks, had been thrown into the water, but Halliwell was not seen again.

RESCUED SIR HENRY.

Mr. King, of Troutbeck, who was nearest to the scene of the tragedy, dived into the water and rescued Sir Henry Segrave, who appeared to be unconscious. They were both picked up, while another motor boat with officials on board picked up Wilcocks.

In a few minutes Miss England II. slowly started to sink, stern foremost, and all the efforts of those in the boats alongside could not keep her on the surface. When the boat reached a certain depth she seemed to remain, with only a few feet of the sharply-pointed bows showing above the surface.

The accident occurred about three-quarters along the measured mile in two hundred feet of water.

DIVED LIKE A BULLET.

A man in one of the official boats, who was within fifty yards of the scene of the disaster, shouted to a Press Association correspondent across the water: "One second Miss England II. was skimming along at a hundred miles an hour, I am sure, with the white foam rising on either side of her bows and her engines screaming deafeningly, and the next second there was that terrible swerve, and she seemed to dive like a bullet beneath the waters. It all seems so eerily silent. The scream of the engines died within a second, and when we next saw the boat she had turned turtle, and was floating on the water."

SEGRAVE'S CONCERN FOR OTHERS.

Mr. King, who rescued Segrave, said:—"I was nearest to Miss England when she crashed. It was awful. The front of the boat underneath by the bows seemed to give way, and she plunged under the water. In a moment the three men were thrown on to the foam, and I saw Segrave in the water. Immediately I turned on the engine, and rushed over to him and pulled him out. The first thing he asked was if the others were safe. Segrave was transferred to a smaller speed boat, Miss London, in which he took part in a race here on Saturday, and he was rushed back to the shed."

Sir Henry was then hurried away in an ambulance to the home of Mr. W. H. Smith, on the western shores of the lake. Three doctors were called, but Sir Henry was beyond medical and surgical aid. He gradually sank, and died between 5 p.m. and 5.30 p.m. from multiple injuries and shock, in the presence of his wife, Lady Segrave.

FRIDAY, THE THIRTEENTH.

On the shore where Sir Henry was landed were a number of mechanics waiting for the news. One of them said: "This has just knocked the stuffing right out of us. What is there to be said? It is terrible. All our labours have gone down in that boat. But it is Friday, the 13th, to-day, and it almost makes me feel superstitious."

Miss England II. was fitted with two 2,000 horse-power Rolls Royce engines, and the propeller was estimated to revolve at twelve thousand revolutions a minute, compared with six thousand, which was the highest any boat had ever attained hitherto.

SIMILAR ACCIDENTS.

Mr. Parry Thomas was killed on Pendine Sands in an attempt to recapture the world's motoring "record" for the flying mile, March 3, 1927.

Flight-Lieutenant S. M. Kinkead was killed in Supermarine Napier 25 monoplane in attempting to break speed "record" near Southampton, March 12, 1928.

Mr. Lee Bible, American racing motorist, was killed at Daytona in an attempt to beat Major Segrave's "record" of 231 m.p.h., March 13, 1929.

Mr. Frank Lockhart was killed at Daytona Beach while motoring at a speed at over 200 m.p.h. on April 25, 1928.

Mr. Ray Keech was killed while leading in a race at Altoona Track on June 15, 1929. He had broken Captain Campbell's "record" and was in turn beaten by Sir Henry Segrave.

BEFORE THE START.

"ANYTHING MAY HAPPEN."

Before going out Sir Henry Segrave said: "Well, now for it. She has chewed up three propellers, and I am trying a bronze one on her now. If this fails I shall put a steel one on, and if that fails I shall postpone my attempt for a week or so to make experiments with a new propeller.

"The boat is an absolute experiment, and anything may happen. But we have got to trust to luck and the wonderful skill of those who have been working on her for so long."

When the news of the accident spread to Windermere, which is three miles from the point at which Miss England II. partially sank, crowds besieged Sir Henry Segrave's hotel, which is on the waterside, and the sheds where the boat is housed, a quarter of a mile away. Special police were brought on the scene to deal with them.

To-night, continues the correspondent, I saw Wilcocks, the only survivor. He was in a bedroom in the Old England Hotel, where Sir Henry stayed. The hotel overlooks the waters of Windermere. Wilcocks was unaware of Sir Henry's death. When I told him that the world's speed "record" had been broken, he said: "Well, I am certain my friend Halliwell will have gone happily, knowing that he has helped to achieve that for which he set out."

Wilcocks supervised the installation of engines in Miss England II., and accompanied Sir Henry on every trial run he made.

"I have no idea what happened to cause the accident," he said, "we may have struck an object or we may not. We made one run at over ninety miles an hour, and on the other we exceeded, I know, the three figure mark. Then we decided to turn round and make a third attempt, and as we swung round the second buoy, Sir Henry stood on the throttle pedal.

"We were all keyed up and tense. We knew anything might happen, but we were taking the risk. The engines were behaving splendidly, and the feeling was marvellous.

"The boat was right on top of her form, and we knew that we were travelling faster than man has ever travelled on water before.

LIKE A NIGHTMARE.

"Then it happened—it is like a nightmare now. All I know was that there was a sudden shudder. I seemed to be falling, falling, falling. That is all I remember. I must have then lost consciousness. I next remember lying in a boat. I have a hazy recollection of being attended to by several people, and then I came to, to find

MALTESE CRISIS.

LORD STRICKLAND HURRYING HOME.

TO CONSULT THE COLONIAL OFFICE.

From Reuter's Correspondent.
MALTA, Friday.

Lord Strickland (the Prime Minister) is leaving unexpectedly for London tomorrow in order to confer with the Colonial Office in regard to the present critical situation in Malta.

The Privy Council was again urgently summoned to the Palace to-day. The members met at one o'clock, sat for half-an-hour, and then met again at three o'clock.

Special legislation designed to strengthen the hands of the police in dealing with public demonstrations had been expected. It is understood, however, that there will be no special Ordinance as the result of the meeting, and that only police orders will be issued.

It is stated that during yesterday's preliminary hearing of the case against John Miller, who attempted to assassinate Lord Strickland, the Premier, on May 23rd, medical evidence was given to the effect that the accused man was not insane, and was fully responsible for his actions.

Miller, who has only one arm, fired a revolver at the Premier from a range of only two yards, as he was entering the Court of Appeal. The bullet passed between Lord Strickland and a judge who was entering the court, and before Miller could take aim a police sergeant seized his wrist. Two other shots lodged in the roof.

Miller during the war was interned in the prison camp. Afterwards he was sentenced to a term of penal servitude for his part in the riots of 1919, during which he tore down the British flag and tried to seduce local troops from their allegiance.

YESTERDAY IN THE DAIL

PROBLEM OF THE SLUMS.

DEPUTY AND "AN OPEN SORE."

HOUSING BILL UNDER DISCUSSION.

From Our Special Representative.

The Dail yesterday returned to the discussion of the Housing Bill, which had reached the commitee stage. Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly was the chief thorn in the Government's side, or fly in the Cumann na nGaedheal ointment. When would the problem of tackling the Dublin slums be entered upon? Why had no appreciable difference been visible since the Government policy started operation in 1924?

General Mulcahy wanted to know why the local authorities, having pens, ink and paper, did not inscribe upon some plain sheets of paper exactly what they thought should be the rent charged for labourers' cottages.

THE SLUM PROBLEM.

Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly returned to the attack with the charge that the slum problem was an open sore. With proper organisation, and building on a large scale, of course, houses could be built at a rent which poor people could pay.

Mr. de Valera did not think much of the Government's policy. He talked about rabbits out of hats, and said that the loan should be extended for fifty years, which, said Mr. de Valera, was the lifetime of an ordinary house.

Dr. Hennessy opposed Mr. de Valera, and Mr. Good also disputed with the leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Moore wanted "bulk purchasing," and asked plaintively what was wrong with the scheme; but General Mulcahy rudely asked why they should not also purchase potatoes, boots and clothes for the ordinary people. Why should they not also purchase fish and chips, or tooth brushes or lawn mowers for the ordinary people?

The bill passed through its remaining stages.

ELECTRICITY AND FISHING.

A short discussion on the Electricity Supply Bill followed. Mr. de Valera wanted to know whether the twenty or twenty-five fishermen who had lost their livelihood in consequence of the Shannon electric scheme would be compensated.

Mr. McGilligan, however, wanted to know why the coal carters of the gas companies who suffered from the advance of electricity should not be compensated. Where was the line to be drawn?

ATLANTIC FLIGHT POSTPONED.

UNFAVOURABLE WEATHER REPORTS.

Owing to a continuance of unfavourable weather conditions over the Atlantic, the Southern Cross will not start on her flight this morning. This only means, however, that the flight has been postponed for another twenty-four hours.

The four airmen went out golfing in the early afternoon. Major Kingsford-Smith and Mr. Vandyk were learning the game for the first time, coached by Captain Saul and Mr. Stannage, who are expert exponents of it.

The only thing of note at Baldonnel Aerodrome yesterday was the news of the forced landing of a Moth light aeroplane of the Free State Army Corps, while out on a flight. The pilot, however, made a safe landing on the disused aerodrome at Tallaght. He was able to effect repairs to the engine himself, and later flew back in it to Baldonnel.

THE VATICAN AND LORD STRICKLAND.

The Vatican City Correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, telegraphing on Friday, says:—"Lord Strickland's reply to accusations recorded against him at the Vatican," published as a supplement to the Malta Government Gazette on June 9, will, I understand, be considered in connection with the British Government's Blue Book in the reply which the Vatican will make in about a week's time.

The document in question has not yet been fully studied, but its "introduction" is not well received here. Indeed, this "introduction" is regarded as typifying the confusion between religion and politics which Lord Strickland is accused of fostering.

As for the assertion that the Church is unable to adjust itself "to the transfer of power from autocracy to democracy," Lord Strickland's claim to a personal preference for the latter form of government provokes amazement. In the opinion of the Vatican, it is Lord Strickland's unyielding autocracy which forms one of the chief obstacles in Malta. "By his very autocracy he sins against the democracy which he possesses," it is said here, and it is added that "despotism" would be a more accurate term to apply to Lord Strickland's methods.

BRITISH AIRMAN KILLED.

Flight-Lieutenant Nigel Henry Neville Fletcher, while engaged in exercises in a Moth 'plane this afternoon, crashed three miles from Stamford and was taken from the machine dead. He was thirty-one years of age, and was married only last November.

TROOPS RUSHED TO BOMBAY.

URGENT CALLS FOR HELP.

LARGE SCALE PICKETING.

VILLAGERS SHOT DEAD BY POLICE.

From Reuter's Correspondent.
POONA, Friday.

The military authorities here have received an urgent message from Bombay asking that a whole battalion of the 4/5th Mahrattas (five hundred strong) be sent to Bombay immediately.

It is stated that troops have also been urgently summoned from other places, presumably in connection with the enforcement of the anti-picketing Ordinance.

From Reuter's Correspondent.
BOMBAY, Friday.

In pursuance of its campaign on a large scale of defiance of the picketing Ordinance, the Bombay Congress Committee, which, it is announced, has two thousand volunteers in reserve for the purpose, began picketing this evening in the northern part of the city; that is to say, in the mill area.

Two hundred and fifty volunteers were posted at 120 foreign and native liquor shops, with orders to prostrate themselves in front of all customers who did not heed their requests not to enter, but they did not have to do this very often, os most of the mill workers kept away.

EFFORT TO CORRUPT POLICE.

From "The Times" Correspondent.
BOMBAY, Friday.

The latest move of the Congress is to appeal to Indian members of the police force to join the "struggle for freedom." Congress volunteers are going about the city appealing to constables, and even to officers, to resign from the force, and leaflets are being disseminated asking the police to rise in mutiny. One volunteer has been arrested while distributing leaflets.

Javant Dalal, editor and publisher of the Congress Bulletin, was to-day sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment on a charge of sedition in respect of an article published on May 16th. The publication of the Congress Bulletin was prohibited on May 15th, and after that date it was published in defiance of the Order.

The article in question stated that the Congress Committee took up the Government's challenge in regard to the publication of the Bulletin. It also stated that there was no British India, but "our India," and that the Satyagraha Committee's "loyalty to the people imposes upon it the duty to be disloyal to the Government." The prosecution contended that the article was calculated to excite feelings of hatred against the Government, and pressed for a deterrent sentence.

The "Sholapur Day" meeting on the Maidan, which started soon after midnight, did not end until about 4 a.m. today. During the early part of the evening the police had several times to charge to clear roads for traffic, and about thirty casualties were admitted to the Congress hospital.

ATTEMPT TO WRECK A TRAIN.

PICKETS ARRESTED IN CALCUTTA.

From "The Times" Correspondent.
CALCUTTA, Friday.

Although conditions in Bengal generally are less turbulent, the position in certain areas gives rise to anxiety and involves a heavy demand on the police.

Rioting on a large scale has ceased at Dacca, but the town continues to be disturbed. There are daily assaults by members of one community or another, and business is at a standstill.

No trace has yet been found of the Police Inspector who was kidnapped at Chechuahat. Over forty arrests have been made in connection with the disturbances in that village, and ample evidence has been obtained that the attack on the police was organised carefully.

So far as Calcutta is concerned, a beginning has been made with the arresting of pickets who attempt to interfere with business in the markets. Women pickets have been busy in the main retail market, and shopkeepers complain bitterly of the loss of business.

An attempt was made on Wednesday to wreck a train by placing heavy stones on the Serajgang line, but these were displaced by the cowcatchers of the train.

ELEVEN SHOT DEAD IN VILLAGE.

POLICE FIRE ON BENGAL RIOTERS.

From Reuter's Correspondent.
KHARAGPUR, Friday.

Eleven men are reported locally to have been killed and several wounded on Wednesday in Khaira village, near Midnapore, when police opened fire on a mob.

According to accounts from official sources the police first made a charge against a crowd which had collected with the object of preventing the arrest of a number of "civil disobedience" volunteers. The mob, however, counter-attacked the constables with staves, and, as the situation was rapidly getting beyond control, the Assistant Superintendent of Police, after shouting several warnings to the crowd, ordered his men to fire.

The number of casualties is given by the police as eleven altogether, of whom "several" were killed, while local unofficial reports put the deaths at eleven.

MOB DESTROYS TOWN RECORDS.

From Reuter's Correspondent.
MADRAS, Friday.

Following the conviction at Tindivanam yesterday of two persons collecting salt illegally, the police were attacked by a mob with sticks and stones. The police opened fire, but no one was injured.

The mob also broke into the District Agricultural Office and destroyed many of the town's records. The office is now guarded by police.

MUTINY OF NATIVE TROOPS.

From Reuter's Correspondent.
SIMLA, Friday.

The courtmartial has pronounced sentence at Abbottabad in the case of the seventeen men of the 18th Garhwal Rifles, who were accused of disobeying orders during the Peshawar disturbance.

One was sentenced to be transported for life, one was sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment, while the remaining fifteen were sentenced to various terms of from three to ten years' rigorous imprisonment.

NOTE—During the disturbances in Peshawar City last April the conduct of a small element—namely, two platoons of the 2nd 18th Royal Garhwal Rifles—was found to be unsatisfactory. The battalion was sent to Abottabad, where the inquiry was held.

BIG YACHTS AT KINGSTOWN.

SHAMROCK V. TO RACE.

By a Special Correspondent.

"Not for twenty years or more have I seen a sight like that on the eve of a Kingstown Regatta," was the comment to me yesterday evening of a man who knows Kingstown and its regattas well, and he accompanied the remark by a sweep of the hand towards the gathering of yachts of all classes and sizes in the harbour.

"It is reminiscent of what used to happen years ago, and, in fact, everything that I see is recalling the past. It did me good, for instance, to see yachts go on the hard this week for a scrub first as they used to do. Why, in the Coal Harbour on Wednesday I was able to have a good lurk at that nice cutter of Mr. John Good's, The Lady Edith, and on the next day there was Mr. H. Bennett's Cork-owned cutter, Verve, getting a polish up, while to-day Mr. Wybrant's Rose was following her example.

"But this," and again he surveyed the harbour with an eloquent gesture, "is the real thing. Look at the Magdalene. I doubt that there is a finer yacht afloat from a sailorman's point of view than Mr. 'Willy' Jameson's grand American-built and designed schooner, which put in on Thursday evening.

"By the way, some were curious to know where she would tie up. Her usual berth is at the second hauling buoy from the eastern end of the jetty, and this, you should know, is Shamrock's buoy. Courtesy demands that. Well, there were people who argued that if Magdalene tied up there such might be taken as a sign that Shamrock V. was not coming. Anxiously, therefore, these watched to see what the schooner would do. She entered the harbour under her own power, circled over towards the western end, her mainmast, by the way, dwarfing the lofty spars of Margherita and Cetonia, and then she picked out a nice berth in the harbour centre, and dropped anchor. The tension was over; that Shamrock V. would arrive was settled.

"And now look at the two other schooners that I have mentioned. Can you tell me when two three-masters of their size and class, and each mainly dependent upon sail for propulsion, have been seen at Kingstown before? Sir William Reardon Smith, Bart., owns Margharita, and he should be proud of her. Does she not look what she is, an ex-racer? See the excessive length of the overhangs. They detract from her appearance now, but they served a purpose when she was built, for they helped in defeating Meteor IV. and Germania in 1913.

RECOGNISED AT A GLANCE.

"Now, look at Cetonia." I ventured to ask my friend at this stage "how the uninitiated could distinguish between the three schooner yachts."

"That is easy," he replied. "When you see out there a very large schooner with two masts and black-coloured sides, you may be certain that you are looking at Magdalene. Those spars of hers, and her hull also, are of steel. They must need a mighty lot of paint to keep them as fresh as they are."

"As for Cetonia and Margherita, both have white sides, and a rough-and-ready way to distinguish between them is to remember that the former has pole masts—she is very modern in this respect—and that the latter has not.

"In fact, Cetonia is a 'daisy' ship, and I confess that I like the look of Lord Stalbridge's yacht better than any other vessel in Kingstown Harbour. She is a real beauty, even if she is the smallest of the trio, being only (he italicised that word) 295 tons, as against Margherita's 380 tons and Magdalene's 481 tons."

"I want you to look particularly at these three yachts, and note how lofty their masts appear to be," he went on to say, "because they will appear quite shrunken when Shamrock V., Lulworth, Cambria and White Heather II. arrive to-morrow."

SHAMROCK'S ARRIVAL.

"Will Shamrock V. come on to-morrow?" I asked. "She may arrive to-night," he replied. "In fact, it would not surprise me in the least if she did, and with her the three other big cutters. And, if not to-night, most certainly some time to-morrow. They have not much wind in the Channel, but it is a fair wind what there is, and I will be disappointed if they do not reach Kingstown Harbour before sundown.

"You will know Shamrock V. at once," he said. "Her green sides give her away at the first glance. She will tie up, I think, at the hauling buoy that I mentioned earlier, and you can have a good look at her from the jetty or from the end the mail boat pier. Remember that you are looking at the first America Cup challenger that ever put into Kingstown previous to her departure for the races at Sandy Hook. And remember also that you will be looking at a very possible winner of the famous Cup, which some will persist in calling the America's Cup.

A HANDSOME VESSEL.

"Shamrock V. is the last word in modernity as regards racing yacht design. They tell me that she is not a handsome vessel, and that with her it is a case of handsome is as handsome does. I am prepared to believe it, and I have a lot of confidence in her skipper, A. Heard, who was here in Astra last year. He is a right good man, but he holds a most responsible post. By the way, I think we all ought to be obliged to Sir Thomas Lipton for sending the yacht round the coast as he is doing this year; for it gives us a chance of viewing close at hand a yacht which we will hear so much about next September.

"I have read so much about her that I am reserving my opinion of what she is like until I see her myself to-morrow. Her mast is lofty, a built and hollow spar, but her sail spread is not excessive. As to the others, did you not see them here last year? Lulworth (the old Terpsichore) is the largest, and has, I think, the loftiest mast. You cannot mistake her. Look for a big cutter with a sail and a moderate forward overhang, and most probably it will be Mr. A. A. Paton's fine ship. Nearly the oldest of the four and the largest, it is her which Shamrock V. usually tries to beat to win.

"Lord Camrose's Cambria is a Fife yacht, which means a 'sweet ship' in the way of looks and general goodness. She was launched only two years ago, and is the nearest sister which the Cup challenger possesses, and yet what a difference there is between them! She sets a Bermudian mainsail like Shamrock V."

White Heather II. is the oldest of all. Lord Waring's cutter, indeed, is well known here, and I am wondering if Captain Montefield has still charge of her. I hope so, for the sake of "old lang syne." She, like Lulworth, is still faithful to the gaff mainsail. I am wondering now if she will tie up at the guardship buoy as she did last year.

"The regatta? Well, you know that there are ten or eleven sailing races on the programme; but, when all is said, is there not only one in the way of general interest—that of the big cutters, which starts each day at 11 o'clock? The starting line is outside harbour, and the yachts go to the southward, or, rather, southeast at first, and so the East Pier is the best vantage place from a sight-seeing point of view. The course will bring them twice round the Kish Lightship, the third round taking in the North and South Burford Buoys. It measures 46½ miles, each of the first two rounds being of 16 miles or thereabouts.

"Will I meet you at the East Pier end on Monday forenoon? Is that what you say? Of course, I will," and with that our conversation ended.

LATE NEWS.

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH "THE TIMES."

SIR HENRY SEGRAVE.

A BRAVE MAN,

The Times of to-day, in an editorial article on Sir Henry Segrave, says:—Yesterday afternoon on Lake Windermere Sir Henry Segrave drove a motor boat faster than anyone had driven a motor boat before and died in the achievement. Rather more than a year ago, at Daytona, Florida, he had driven a motor car faster than anyone had driven a motor car before or has driven one since. For eight years he had survived the perils of motor racing on land. For eighteen months or more he had courted those of motor racing on the water, and to these, which are probably as great or greater, he has succumbed. He was a very brave man; but he was not a rash or a reckless man: he never took unnecessary risks. But his being was concentrated on attaining speed. Such a man guards against danger only in so far as it would hamper him in his purpose. If he thinks about death at all, swift death in a moment of triumph is probabdy the end that he would desire.

It has yet to be shown that humanity is any the better for the speed in movement which the experiments and the achievements of a Segrave put within its reach. But if speed is nothing, the spirit that urged Segrave to speed is a great and noble thing. It is the spirit of adventure, of courage, of honourable emulation, which, however useless its objects may be, is in itself a higher thing than that which would suffer human life to drag listlessly on in grooves of habit and of indifference. By his courage, his determination, his vitality, his devotion to an end, Sir Henry Segrave set an example to all. A man of genius in his own field, he must be counted among those who have deserved well of their kind, and his name will be remembered in honour.

MISS ENGLAND'S ENGINES.

A RECENTLY DISCOVERED ALLOY.

The Times Motoring Correspondent writes:—The Rolls-Royce engines in Sir Henry Segrave's boat, Miss England II., were constructed largely of the recently discovered aluminium alloy, known as Hiduminium R.R. 50. Evolved in the Rolls-Royce laboratories, R.R. 50 was one of the secrets of the engines which won the Schneider Trophy for this country last September.

Though originally designed to give 875 h.p., each unit was lightened and modified until it delivered nearly 2,000 b.h.p., with a power weight ratio of 12 ozs. per brake horse power—an astonishing figure for a water-cooled engine, and this with an even greater factor of reliability than before, thanks to the adoption of the new metal. The reason is that R.R. 50 is not only lighter and tougher than former aluminium alloys; it has many times their resistance to fatigue under the stress of heat and prolonged vibration. The engines in Miss England II. are very similar to those of the historic S 6 seaplane which successfully withstood the severe strains of flying for long periods at over 350 m.p.h., but in the boat an even greater power output, and consequently lower weight per horse power, was obtained from them.

Another advantage of R.R. 50 is that it is cheaper to produce than former alloys, and already, it is stated officially, inquiries from continental countries have been so numerous and valuable that the licensees have found it necessary to open an office in Paris to deal with the growing foreign business in the new metal.

POLITICIANS AND WIRELESS.

PROBLEM OF FREE SPEECH BETWEEN NATIONS.

The issue of The Listener to be published on Monday will contain the talk on "The New Intercourse Between Nations," by Mr. Walter Lippman, editor of the New York World, delivered on June 9th in the B.B.C. National broadcast programme.

Referring to the changes necessitated in domestic political speeches since the introduction of wireless, Mr. Lippman remarks that in the old days a candidate could be the business man's friend on Monday, the working man's friend on Tuesday, and the farmer's friend on Wednesday.

"Wireless has altered that, and the immediate effect is to teach leaders of national parties that it is expedient to avoid issues about which voters have prior views."

FRANK, OR AMBIGUOUS.

Mr. Lippman continues: "The question whether speech which is broadcast internationally is to be frank and free, or ambiguous and muffled, is even more complicated, and between nations of different language, where only a relatively small minority can understand an international speech, the problem may not arise for some time; but, as between our English-speaking peoples, the problem is near at hand. It is now possible for a British statesman to speak direct to the American people and for an American to speak to the British.

"In the next few years we shall have to decide as a matter of public policy whether this radical new kind of international intercourse is to be freely permitted, is to be uncensored and encouraged. Then we shall also have to decide whether speakers exercising the facilities of international speech are to speak as frankly as they would to their own fellow-countrymen.

MOMENTOUS DECISION.

"The decision will be momentous. The consequences are incalculable; for we have seen the breakdown of a well-established rule of international affairs that public men may address a foreign people only through its Government. The time has come, therefore, to ask ourselves if the Governments are going to try to enforce the old rule, if they are going to try to censor the speeches of the foreigner, if they are going to insist that he confine his remarks to the beautiful compliments and the studiously veiled argument that an Ambassador employs when he finds it necessary to be seen and does not wish to be heard.

"Some attempts will be made, I suppose, by Governments to establish a political control of this new medium of communication. I believe that as between the English-speaking peoples, at least, these attempts will fail."

TRAMCAR OVERTURNS IN MANCHESTER.

One person was killed and twenty-nine received injuries which necessitated their detention in hospital when a Manchester Corporation double-decker tramcar fouled the points at a junction and turned over on its side last night.

The tram was nearly full, and the passengers, who had been flung in a heap, were extricated by a large corps of ambulance men.

Screams and shrieks echoed in the street, and traffic was held up for nearly two hours.

Private cars which were following the tramcar narrowly escaped running into the wreckage.

The dead woman was Mrs. Whitton, aged 45, the wife of a Salford police constable, of 14 King street, Leicester road, High Broughton.

FIRST CRICKET TEST.

ENGLAND OPEN THE GAME.

DAY OF MIXED EMOTIONS.

MASTERLY BATTING BY HOBBS.

CLOSE OF PLAY.
ENGLAND .... 241 for eight.

From a Special Correspondent.
NOTTINGHAM, Friday.

A day of mixed emotions was the lot of the fifteen thousand spectators who saw the beginning of the first Test match at Trent Bridge, Nottingham, to-day. Thrills there were in plenty, disappointments too—then dismal rain.

Before the rain set in there were compensations in a magnificent captain's "knock" by Chapman and some masterly batting by Hobbs.

Nottingham was cricket mad. Soon after sunrise the first of the spectators reached the ground. Hours before the gates opened there was a queue that stretched for half a mile past the Trent bridge. In the city those who could not get to the ground contented themselves by giving both teams an overwhelming greeting when they left their hotels.

OVATION FOR TEAMS.

Market square was lined with people when Woodfull and his men emerged somewhat nervously from their hotel. A great cheer went up and the men and girls struggled to pat the cricketers on the back. The team's drive to the ground was a triumphal procession, and they must have found their reception at Trent Bridge embarrassingly cordial.

The Englishmen, too, were greeted with tremendous cheering, and when Chapman went out to inspect the pitch before the match began the roar that went up could have been heard a mile away.

A couple of hours later those spectators were the most dejected people in England. Sutcliffe gone, Hammond gone, Woolley and Hendren—who would stop the rot?

But there was always Hobbs. Thirty thousand eyes were focussed on the master batsman. Fifteen thousand people sighed with relief as he played ball after ball with quiet, unruffled confidence; fifteen thousand voices cheered when the Surrey idol put the ball beyond the reach of the fieldsmen and the total on the score board gradually mounted up.

What a scene it was. Of those fifteen thousand people nearly half were women. Girls came in parties, mothers brought their sons, and wives forgot their household duties to accompany their husbands.

A TENSE MOMENT.

It was a tense moment when Chapman and Woodfull came from the pavilion to toss. The crowd held its breath while Chapman sent his famous lucky-half sovereign up into the air. "Heads," called Woodfull. The coin fell to the ground, rolled over, and finally came to rest at the rival captains' feet.

Chapman's cheery smile showed which way the luck of the toss had gone. Woodfull shrugged his shoulders, almost imperceptibly, and Chapman hurried into the pavilion to tell Hobbs and Sutcliffe to get their pads on.

But in the pavilion was one disconsolate figure, who sat alone in a corner. He was Duleepsinhji, who had been left out of what would have been his first Test Match against Australia. A smile lit up his dark face when I offered my sympathy. "The luck of the game, you know," he said. "Of course, it is disappointment, but we had to field our best team. Anyhow, there are four other test matches."

START OF THE GAME.

The game started well for the spectators, who hugged themselves with delight, as the runs came steadily from Hobbs and Sutcliffe. But disappointment was not far away.

Sutcliffe went, and the crowd gasped; Hammond and Woolley followed him, and the crowd groaned; Hendren failed, and the crowd lapsed into dejected silence. But there was still Hobbs, and upon him the crowd centred all their hopes, and they were not disappointed.

When at last he went, just before the day's play ended, those in the pavilion stood to pay tribute to his rock-like innings. But Jack walked out like a man in a trance; he forgot even to acknowledge the cheers. The great batsman showed how keenly disappointed he was in leaving the wicket just before the day's play ended.

Best of all to-day was Chapman's ten glorious fours. Ten times the crowd roared with delight, as the ball sped to the boundary.

THE PITCH GUARDED.

Extraordinary precautions are being taken to guard the pitch to-night. Policemen are to be on duty, and searchlights have been erected so that the officers may see that nothing disturbs the precious strip of turf.

The rain won't make any difference to the pitch," said Mr. Walter Marshall, the veteran groundsman. "I took rain into consideration in its preparation. It will be just as firm to-morrow as it was at the beginning of play to-day."

The teams are being very carefully nursed. Bed at ten o'clock is the order for all the players, though last night Grimmett stayed up talking cricket till nearly midnight.

The two teams are to dine together, but whether they will talk cricket nobody knows. At any rate, it is certain that neither Chapman nor Woodfull will disclose his plans to win the game.

INTENSE INTEREST IN THE MATCH.

follow the commentary, and, despite the coldness of the night, remained clustered around the fireside, following every detail with interest.

The coldness of the night and the lateness of the hour were forgotten when the sensational news of Australia's early successes was given. When Hornibrook missed Sutcliffe off Grimmett's bowling their spirits sank, but they rose again when the announcer told them of the downfall of Sutcliffe, the redoubtable Hammond, and then Oldfield's dismissal of Woolley with a smart piece of stumping.

The excitement was intense, and appetites were whetted for more sensations, but with the score at 109 for four wickets the running commentary from 2UW was ended.

For those enthusiasts who still remained out of their beds a half-hourly service of reports was broadcast.

There is ample evidence of the success of the broadcast, which was radiated from the Sydney station, by the hundreds of letters of congratulation which are pouring in hourly to the broadcast authorities. The description was so vivid and detailed that the public found it hard to believe that the announcer was not speaking from the Press box at Nottingham, but was relying on an elaborate arrangement of code messages sent by cable and beam wireless direct from Trent Bridge.

A QUARTER OF A MILE UNDER THE SEA.

AMERICAN'S DESCENT IN STEEL SPHERE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Friday.

Mr. William Beebe, of the New York Zoological Society, yesterday surpassed his earlier feat by going down in his steel sphere to the ocean bed of Hamilton, Bermuda, a depth of 1,426 feet (over a quarter of a mile). Through the heavy quartz windows he was easily able to observe fish swimming about and fauna on the sea bed.

As on the earlier occasion, when he went 800 feet down, the sphere was lowered by a steel cable. It carried a telephone, oxygen air supply, and an apparatus for absorbing the exhaled air.

The old "record" depth was 325 feet.

THREE MEN DEAD IN A TANK.

ACCIDENT AT HAY-MAKING OPERATION.

Three men were fatally gassed in a silo used for making hay at Stretton-under-Fosse, near Rugby, yesterday.

They were W. P. Crofts, a well-known farmer, and two employés, George Jackson and Ernest Brain.

A silo is a pit or airtight structure in which green crops are pressed and kept for fodder undergoing fermentation.

For a few days workmen on three farms had been engaged in placing cut grass in a silo tower, where it is trampled into hay.

About 8.30 o'clock yesterday morning George Jackson went to the silo tower, and almost immediately a message was sent to Mr. Crofts, the farmer, to the effect that something was wrong.

Crofts and a wagoner named Ernest Brain entered the silo to bring Jackson out, but they, too, were overcome. It was some time before the bodies were recovered by sons of the farmer and another man. All three were dead.

It seems clear that Brain lost his life in an endeavour to save Jackson, and that Mr. Crofts died in his efforts to rescue Brain and Jackson.

The silo is a large metal tank standing upon girders and reaching to a height of 50 or 60ft.

SEGRAVE'S DEATH.

myself lying in this bed. I am so pleased we have broken the 'record,' but the loss of life is ghastly."

Wilcocks has one eye hurt and his face is bruised, while he had a big gash in his side. Yet, he continued calmly to smoke one cigarette after another.

Mr. A. G. Reynolds, one of the official timekeepers, said: "We understood that Sir Henry was to have made an attempt on the mile both ways, and then he was going to change his bronze propeller for a steel one, which is faster. Apparently he changed his mind, and came back a third time with the bronze propeller."

Sir Henry covered the first measured mile in 43 seconds at a speed of 83.72 knots, or an average of 96.41 miles per hour. He did the second lap in 41 seconds, which represents 87.80 knots, an average speed of 101.11 miles an hour. The figures taken to constitute the new "record" were based on the average of the two speeds Segrave attained. This gave an average of 98.76 miles per hour.

MAY HAVE HIT A BOTTLE.

MARINE ENGINEER'S THEORY.

Mr. F. Bamford, the marine engineer, who was in charge of the propeller, said to-night: "I saw the whole thing. The boat seemed to fly into the air before it disappeared in a sea of foam. I should think it is quite probable that the boat hit some small object like a bottle, and that caused the accident. It must have been something that was inert. However small, it would have caused Miss England to jump like that. That might have damaged the step, which would cause her to capsize. I should say quite definitely that the stern part of the shaft and the rudder were absolutely intact."

THE DEAD MECHANIC.

Mr. P. V. C. Halliwell had been with the Rolls-Royce Company as an engineer's tester for five years, and was engaged in the experimental department. He was regarded as a clever mechanic, familiar in particular with high-speed engines. He and his wife, whose parents live in the Bristol district, had resided in Chain lane, Mickleover, near Derby. They have a boy aged two and a half years. The mother and child were on holiday at Windermere at the time of the accident.

SIR HENRY'S EARLY YEARS.

HIS HOME IN CO. WICKLOW.

Born at Cabra, County Dublin, in 1896, Sir Henry Segrave was the son of Mr. Charles W. Segrave, who, while living in Newtownmountkennedy, was for a number of years a member of the Royal Irish Automobile Club. At that time Sir Henry was a boy at school.

He was afterwards educated at Eton and Sandhurst. On returning home from college, just before the Great War, Sir Henry was to be seen frequently at the Automobile Club garage. He drove an Itala car, which at that time was a fast sporting model, and so gained his first knowledge of driving.

SERVICE IN THE WAR.

On the outbreak of the war he joined the Royal Air Force, in which he did good work. He had at least one wonderful escape during the war, and was wounded three times. He was mentioned in despatches, and in 1916 was attached to General Headquarters, France. The following year he was appointed Private Secretary to the Chief of Air Staff.

In 1916 he married Dois, daughter of Mr. W. J. Stocker.

After the war, he drove for years with Mr. K. Lee Guinness. Sir Henry Segrave and Mr. Guinness were the leading racing motorists of the world, a title which they held for a great many years, until Mr. Guinness met with a bad accident while driving in the Grand Prix in Spain, after which he retired from motor racing.

HIS INTEREST IN RACING IN DUBLIN.

Sir Henry continued to drive and had beaten the world's land speed "records" on two occasions. For some time previous to his death he had been engaged in attempting to regain for England the world's speed "record" on water.

When in 1924 the Royal Irish Automobile Club first thought of holding motor races in the Phœnix Park, Major Segrave, as he then was, with Mr. K. Lee Guinness—both of whom had much experience of Continental race circuits—inspected the roads in the Park and selected a circuit which they said would be one of the finest racing circuits in the world. More recently Sir Henry assisted the committee of the club in the arrangements for the first Grand Prix, and was present at the races last year.

The Segrave family were well-known in Dublin, and Mr. Charles W. Segrave, his father, who is at present living in London, played a prominent part in trials and hill-climbs in Ireland in 1907, 1908 and 1909.

TWO VICTORIES.

HIS GRIM DETERMINATION.

Sir Henry's grim determination to attain his end in spite of all risks was well illustrated when he was leaving Southampton in 1928 for his attack on the land speed "record" at Daytona Beach. When he was wished God-speed and good-luck, he replied, quietly, "I shall either do it or kill myself in the attempt. But whatever happens I shall step on the gas and drive like hell."

Within ten days, in March, 1929, Sir Henry won the world land speed "record" and the world's motor-boat speed championship. At Daytona Beach, on March 11, he attained a speed of over 231 miles an hour—nearly four miles a minute—in the "Golden Arrow," wresting the world's land "record" from Mr. Ray Keech, the American. Then, on March 21, he raced Sir Charles Wakefield's motor-boat "Miss England," the predecessor of the ill-fated craft, against Commodore Garwood's "Miss America VII.," at Miami Beach, Florida. He was beaten by the American in the second test, but as he had completed the course in the first test and the American had not he gained the championship on points. Miss England was damaged in the second test by a floating log, and had to slow down. The average speeds recorded in this race were comparatively low—61.276 miles an hour for Commodore Garwood's boat and 42.756 miles an hour for Miss England.

Lady Segrave accompanied her husband to Daytona Beach, but before leaving Southampton she said:—"I do not think I can bear the terrible ordeal of watching my husband risk his life."

With great pluck, however, she changed her mind, and after his great achievement she said she had seen him fly past her and then shut her eyes.

Three days after his feat at Daytona Beach Sir Henry announced that he would retire from motor racing. When in April this year there were rumours that he was again to take part in motor racing, Lady Segrave said in an interview:—"I shall be very disappointed if he races again."

HIS WAR INJURY.

A wound received on active service necessitated the insertion of a silver plate in one foot, but this did not deter him from taking up motor racing. He first appeared on Brooklands track in 1920, and at once became ambitious of setting up a "record" of 200 miles an hour.

Two years before creating his world's "record" of 231 miles an hour at Daytona Beach he had decided never again to take an active part in motor racing. This was following his performance of 207 miles an hour, also at Daytona Beach. It was then that he announced that he was changing from motor cars to motor boats. At the same time Sir Henry still retained a preference for motor cars. "What I feel most intensely," he said, after beating Mr. Garwood in the first heat of the race for the motor boat championship, "is that I'd sooner drive a car at 130 miles an hour for three days a week than do 90 miles an hour in a boat for one day. There is no comparison of the risk involved, but it is so damned uncomfortable in the boat."

SIR HENRY'S FATHER.

As soon as Mr. Charles W. Segrave, Sir Henry's father, heard of the accident, he made arrangements to dash to his son's side by aeroplane and fast motor car. Arrangements were made by telephone for a machine to be in readiness at Stag Lane Aerodrome to take him to Manchester Municipal Aerodrome, where a motor car and driver awaited to take him on to Lake Windermere.

Mr. Segrave arrived at Stag Lane by motor car about 5 o'clock and flew to Manchester, completing the journey by car.

TRIBUTES.

The Hon. Victor Bruce:—"On behalf of my wife and myself I must say that Sir Henry was certainly the right man to make the attempt to break the "records." He was a supremely skilful pilot, but in cases like this everything is so much of an experiment that no one could tell what would happen."

Mr. Stenson Cooke, secretary of the Automobile Association, said:—"Every motorist will deplore the sad end of Segrave. He has so bravely and efficiently upheld British prestige on land, sea, and in the air."

Mr. Kaye Don, the racing motorist, who is staying in the Isle of Man for the T.T. Races: "Great Britain has lost one of her greatest sportsmen and pioneers who ever lived. All who knew him personally will remember him as one of the most lovable of men. I shall never forget his help and encouragement when I went to America for my speed attempt. He was of tremendous assistance to me."

Captain Malcolm Campbell:—"I cannot find words to express the horror and grief with which I received the news. My heart goes out to Lady Segrave in her loss."

The Master of Sempill, President of the Royal Aeronautical Society, sent the following telegram to Lady Segrave last night:—"In very real sorrow I am sending you, on behalf of all the members of the Royal Aeronautical Society, these few words attempting to convey our deepest sympathy on the irreparable loss you have suffered by the death of your gallant and widely talented husband. He had only recently, much to the satisfaction of his many friends and associates, returned to aviation, in which he had filled such a distinguished part during the war, and he had only just been elected a member of the Society. His loss will be very keenly felt."

Lord Wakefield:—"I mourn the loss of a friend. To say that he was the most courageous man I have ever met is only a small part of my conception of him. His loss is a tragic national loss. He was a noble gentleman in his personal aspects, and undoubtedly a great man. I am a better man for having known him, and his life will be an inspiration to me to the end of my days."

AMERICAN SYMPATHY.

COMMODORE GARWOOD'S TRIBUTE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Friday.

The news of Major Sir Henry Segrave's tragic death on Lake Windermere this afternoon after he had broken the world's speed "record" on water has come as a great shock to the American sporting public, by whom his dash on the Daytona sands will always be remembered.

Commodore Garwood, America's premier motor-boat driver, who held the world's "record" until it was beaten by Sir Henry to-day, said:—"Sir Henry Segrave was one of my very best friends. The news of this fatal accident has come as a terrible shock to me. I feel completely upset about it. I looked upon him as an outstanding figure in the demonstration of the art of high-speed achievements. His loss, I know, will be mourned by every sportsman in the world, particularly by those interested in the ultimate speed of motor boats and high speed cars."

IN GREAT PAIN.

Mr. A. V. Peck, Vice-Commodore of Windermere Boating Club, who was present when Sir Henry died, told a reporter that Sir Henry was conscious until two minutes before he died. He was in terrible pain, but he bore it marvellously. His one thought was whether he had broken the record. Lady Segrave, who was sitting at the bedside, told him that he had.

"He was so much master of himself," added Mr. Peck, "that he asked by how much he had beaten the record.

"He died from shock and internal hæmorrhage, the ribs on the right side having punctured the lung.

"Before he went out for the attack on the record, he remarked jocularly to his friends that it was Friday, the 13th, and he wondered what would happen."

ROSSLARE AND MISS JOHNSON.

ROSSLARE Publicity Committee has decided to invite those arranging for the exhibition of Miss Amy Johnson's aeroplane to include Rosslare in the tour of centres.

RELIGIOUS PROFESSIONS.

The professions have taken place at the Convent of Perpetual Adoration, Wexford, of Sister M. Terese Roche, daughter of the late Mr. P. Roche, Oulart; and of Sister M. Monica Larkin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larkin, Rathimney, Gusserane.

EXCITING BOATING INCIDENT.

An exciting boating incident took place in the Abbey River, LIMERICK, yesterday, near Matthew Bridge. About noon a man, three women and two children were proceeding up the river, which was on the ebb at the time, and just after passing the bridge their boat swung the corner, struck one of the buttresses and threw the occupants into the water. Some men sitting on the quay-wall rushed to their assistance, and, after considerable difficulty, succeeded in taking them ashore. They suffered from slight shock, but were enabled to proceed home. The boat was smashed.

ALLEGED FORGERY.

Allegations that he had stolen blank paying orders belonging to an Urban Council, forged and uttered them, were made at DUNDALK District Court yesterday against Edward Morten, a former resident of Carrickmacross, County Monaghan. Morten was charged in respect of the forgery and uttering of four paying orders belonging to the Carrickmacross Urban Council. The offences were alleged to have been committed two years ago, and last week Morten was arrested in Manchester. The accused man was remanded, and informed the Justice that he was not looking for bail.

APPROVED SOCIETIES.

Opposition to the intention of the Free State Government to reduce the number of approved societies operating in the Free State under the National Insurance Acts, was voiced at the annual meeting of St. Patrick's Diocesan Society in DUNDALK. The Very Rev. Canon Lyons, Adm., who presided, said: "In my opinion, centralisation is the worst evil of present-day government, and if the day ever comes when the Acts will be administered by a State Department, the people will experience a service as hard and as unrelenting as the collection of income tax." A resolution was passed unanimously expressing "strong disapproval of any such retrograde step, which they feel would be detrimental to the best interests of insured persons."

POTATO ORDER HARDSHIP.

An instance of the hardship inflicted on Cooley farmers, who are unable to dispose of the thousands of tons of surplus potatoes, was given at DUNDALK District Court yesterday, when Arthur O'Hagan, a Bellurgan farmer, was prosecuted by the Free State Department of Agriculture for a breach of the Black Scab Order. Evidence was given that the defendant had been stopped by a Civic Guard, who found that O'Hagan's cart was loaded with potatoes, which he admitted he had been taking from Ballymascanlon to Dundalk. When asked why he was breaking the Order, the defendant told the Guard that he had to make some provision for himself and his horse, and he could not allow them both to starve. District Justice Goff said that he would allow the defendant off this time under the Probation of Offenders Act, but this was not to be a precedent. The fine under the Order on conviction is a statutory one of £10.

BELFAST COUNCILLOR RESIGNS.

Councillor J. W. Watters, a well-known BELFAST solicitor, has resigned his membership of the Corporation, as the new Corporation Bill prevents professional men from acting for any person or firm in legal proceedings against the Corporation. In a letter to the Town Clerk, Mr. Watters states:—"As I cannot allow my Corporation duties to interfere with my professional duties to my clients, I have no alternative but to send my resignation to you as Councillor for Ormeau Ward." Councillor Watters has represented Ormeau Ward for 12½ years, during portion of which period he sat as alderman. He has served on many of the leading committees, and for a term was chairman of the Law Committee.

CORK CORPORATION VACANCIES.

Twenty candidates were nominated yesterday for the seven seats on the Cork Corporation, rendered vacant by the retirement, under the Act, of seven members. They are made up of four Cumann na nGaedheal, four Fianna Fail, four Business Party, three Labour, and five Independents. John Fitzpatrick (Fianna Fail) is the only outgoing member not seeking re-election. The candidates are: Cumann na nGaedheal—David Curtin, draper, outgoing; Liam de Roiste, company secretary, outgoing; Barry M. Egan, T.D., and John Murphy, vintner. Fianna Fail—Joseph Donnelly, baker and merchant; David J. Hennessy, accountant; David O'Brien, merchant, and Michael O'Donovan, transport worker. Business Party—Richard Cudmore, merchant, outgoing; Richard H. Beamish, merchant; William T. Day, merchant, and Joseph Spillane, victualler. Labour Party—James Barry, outgoing; John Good, a former member, and Thomas O'Gorman, organiser Irish Union of Distributive Workers and Clerks. Independents—James Allen, gas workers, outgoing; Sean Cronin, undertaker, outgoing; Francis J. Daly, Blackrock, merchant; Jeremiah Kelleher, tailor and tobacconist, a former member, and on behalf of the Ratepayers' Association, Sir John Harley Scott, Knight, also a former member.

INTERESTING DECISION.

Judge Linehan at DUNGANNON Quarter Sessions yesterday gave a decision for possession in a case in which the Armagh Diocesan Board of Education, with the Revd. E. F. Campbell, M.A., former Incumbent of Killyman Parish Church, and the Revd. Henry E. Hardy, M.A., the present incumbent, were plaintiffs in an ejectment suit against Henry Mitchell, Principal of Killyman Public Elementary School, for possession of a teacher's residence. The case, which had been heard at length, is in the nature of a test case by the Ulster Teachers' Union, as with the recent Education Act several teachers in the district are in a similar position. The judge said that he did not suppose that such a combination of circumstances had arisen before. The defendant was in possession under an agreement which came into existence at a time when a certain relationship existed between him and the plaintiffs, which relationship had now by the course of legislation become obsolete. The vital document throwing a light on the true relationship of the parties was what was officially described as the caretaker's agreement, which the defendant said he signed, but which the Revd. Mr. Hardy, the present incumbent, who made the letting, said that he did not sign.

REPARATIONS LOAN.

THE FRENCH SHARE LARGELY SUBSCRIBED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Friday.

While no announcement has yet been made, it was believed in well-informed circles at mid-day that the French portion of the big Reparations Loan had already, to a large extent, been subscribed. The French share totals 2,515 million francs, issued in 1,000 gold franc bonds at 982.50.

SWEDISH PORTION OVER-SUBSCRIBED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

STOCKHOLM, Friday.

The issue of the Swedish portion of the big International Reparations Loan has been a great success, the maximum sum of 44,000,000 kronor being considerably over-subscribed.

EXHIBITION OF ELECTRICAL EQUIPMENT.

An interesting exhibition of electrical equipment for domestic purposes and small industries was provided by the Electricity Supply Board in the Crawford Municipal Technical Institute, Cork, in conjunction with the Congress. Most of the electrically driven hand tools were exhibited in this country for the first time, and they included different varieties of drills, grinders, soldering irons and woodworking tools. The Dewalt woodworker was an unusually interesting little machine which would be found most useful to builders, cabinet makers, saw millers and wood trades generally. All these electrical tools are very cheap to use, costing about ½d. to 1½d. per hour to operate, and they enable the worker to turn out from ten to twenty times more work than he could by hand labour. The use of them places small industries on a par with mass production factories in comparative output. Delegates to the Congress were most interested in this particular exhibit.

The all-electric kitchen, which the Electricity Supply Board equipped, also proved an attraction, especially to women. The equipment included different types of Moffat electric ranges, breakfast cookers, automatic water heater, washing machines, ironing machine and a number of smaller appliances, such as electric kettle, toaster, milk warmer, coffee-percolater, boiling plate and egg beater. During the next two weeks there will be cooking demonstrations given in this kitchen for the women of Cork.

U.S. MARKETS.

STOCKS CLOSE IRREGULAR.

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.

NEW YORK, Friday.

The market opened irregular, and pivotal issues were early supported, but renewed bear pressure soon depressed the list substantially. Trading, however, became very dull on the decline. Extensive short covering later caused a broad advance, which was accelerated by hasty buying, in anticipation of a substantial technical rebound. Earlier losses were mostly regained, and a long list of issues rose above yesterday. However, there was no inclination to forecast any sustained advance until a decided turn appears in business. Unsettled commodity prices, with Copper again reduced, had an adverse influence, while the decrease of 103,000,000 dollars in Brokers' Loans for the week, which was about as expected, failed to affect the sentiment. Call money ruled at 2½ per cent., but it was pointed out that the abundance of credit continues primarily to reflect slack business. The market closed irregular. Government Bonds dull; Railroad Bonds steady. The day's sales totalled 2,218,600 shares.

Money on call closed steady at 2½ per cent. bid and 2¾ per cent. asked. All loans were transacted at 2½ per cent. Sterling exchange quiet. Silver ⅛c. lower at 34⅞.

Values declined on advices of heavy beneficial rains in sections of Manitoba and a larger Winnipeg car-lot movement, together with Liverpool reports of pressure of Indian and Plate wheats at cheaper prices. NEW YORK COTTON.

COTTON commenced steady, but 5 to 14 points down. Early recessions were due to a renewal of July liquidation and general selling of new crop on favourable weather accounts and poor trade reports. A rally developed afterwards on shorts covering owing to a forecast for showers; but, influenced by the weakness of wheat, renewed selling developed, and stop orders were uncovered. The market finished barely steady, with old contracts 30 to 23 points down and new contracts 24 to 28 points lower. Spot easy at 30 points loss. At New Orleans futures opened 1 to 7 points cheaper, and closed 24 to 27 points down. Spot declined 25 points.

CHICAGO MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Friday.

WHEAT opened barely steady, and ¼c. to ½c. lower on Liverpool advices of increased pressure of hard winter wheats and a private summary of the spring wheat area, indicating a promising outlook for a larger movement. The market continued to decline owing to the disappointing export trade, excellent harvesting weather in the South-West, and hedging by South-West houses, and closed weak at declines of 2c. to 2⅛c.

says
Mrs. Cottington Taylor
Good Housekeeping Institute

"I AM always interested in any preparation which assists the housewife to provide attractive dishes and has real food value. In gravy preparations particularly, flavour and nourishment are of even greater importance than thickening and colouring properties.

"We have used Stok in Good Housekeeping Institute in the preparation of many dishes.

"I can recommend it heartily as being an excellent gravy preparation—it is simple to use, gives meat dishes a delicious flavour and adds to their nourishment."

D. D. COTTINGTON TAYLOR
Director, Good Housekeeping Institute

THERE couldn't be a finer recommendation for Stok than this opinion, expressed by such a famous cookery expert—an opinion shared by nine other cookery experts, who helped to formulate Stok.

Stok makes wonderful gravy—so rich, so brown, so full of nourishment, for, unlike ordinary gravy preparations, Stok is made from meat, blended with other important ingredients to give it seasoning.

It's so simple to use, too! It flavours, thickens, and colours at the same time. Your grocer has Stok—2½d. and 7½d., or send for it to The Aintree Company Ltd., North John St., Liverpool.

Try this delicious recipe for MINCE

10 ozs. cooked beef, 1 small onion, 1 oz. dripping, 1 oz. flour, 3 gills gravy made with 3 teaspoonfuls Stok and 3 gills water, a few drops Worcester Sauce or Mushroom Ketchup, pepper and salt.

Chop the onion finely and fry it in the melted dripping. Remove from the pan, add the flour and cook gently over a slow heat until it is sufficiently browned. Then add the gravy, made with Stok, bring to the boil, return the onion, add pepper, salt, Worcester Sauce, and simmer gently for half an hour. If the gravy boils away during cooking, a little more may be added. Add the minced beef and re-heat for about 8 minutes, but do not bring to the boil.

SHOTS AT BRITISH TRAWLER.

INCIDENT IN DANISH WATERS.

On arriving at Grimsby yesterday from Iceland, Peter Jensen, skipper of the trawler Baranga, reported that a Danish cruiser had fired four shots across his ship's bows.

"We had no fish on board," said Jensen in an interview. "We were in the three miles limit, but as we were only on passage, I did not stop until the fourth shell had been fired. It was so close that I rang for the ship to stop. A boarding party searched the trawler, and then took me aboard the cruiser, where I found a number of highly-placed Danish officers and a Prince of the Royal House on their way to the centenary celebrations in Iceland.

"I was asked why I did not stop, and I replied that I did not think that the gunfire applied to me, as I was doing nothing wrong. I also mentioned that I had not been out of sight of the cruiser for forty-eight hours. After about ten minutes I was allowed to return to the trawler."

The matter is being taken up by the Trawler Owners' Federation, who are reporting the facts to the Foreign Office.

PRISON RIOT QUELLED BY TEAR GAS BOMBS.

From Reuter's Correspondent.
MANSFIELD, OHIO, Friday.

An attempt to create a riot was made to-day by fifteen hundred convicts serving sentences in the reformatory here. Tables and stools in the diningroom were hurled about, but the guards got the upper hand by the use of tear gas bombs, and quiet was restored.

TRINITY COLLEGE, DUBLIN.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR TRINITY MONDAY.

The results of the examinations for Fellowships and Scholarships of Trinity College, Dublin, will be announced, as usual, by the Provost from the steps of the Examination Theatre at about 11 o'clock a.m. on Trinity Monday. Two Fellowships are offered for competition this year, one in mathematics and one in economics and political science.

The annual meeting of the Trinity College (Dublin) Association will take place in the Graduates' Memorial Building at 3 o'clock.

The usual Commemoration Service will be held in the College Chapel at 5 o'clock. An address will be delivered in the Chapel by Mr. Bolton Waller on Thomas Davis, the poet, and leader of the Young Ireland movement, who graduated in 1836. Doctors will wear their robes at this Service.

The scholars of the year and of the preceding decades, who have received invitations to dine in the hall, are requested to assemble in the Provost's Garden at 6.45 punctually, for a photograph of the group.

Strong opposition by the Civic Guards was made at DUNDALK yesterday to applications by publicans for occasional licences for a sports meeting at Magoney on June 19, which is a Church holiday. District Justice Goff refused one, and adjourned the other, but intimated that he would not grant either. The Church had recently issued a decree about racing and coursing on Church holidays, and they were all bound to take notice of that.

GOSSIP FROM THE COURSE

A POOR RACE.

MINT MASTER'S LUCK IN THE CUP.

AN AMERICAN VICTORY.

From Our Travelling Correspondent.

MANCHESTER, Friday Night.

The Manchester Cup, which was won this afternoon by Sir Victor Sassoon's lightly-weighted five-year-old Mint Master, ridden by Fox, was one of the worst-run races I have seen for a long time. Although the conditions were perfect the time was some four seconds below the standard for the course, and every jockey who rode in the race admitted that it was not a race at all until they came into the straight.

It was Knight of the Grail who set the pace, and after they had gone a quarter of a mile Mint Master took it up. He did not set anything like a good gallop, but he was lucky in that being in front he escaped a good deal of scrimmaging which took place in the straight when Weston was extricating Six Wheeler from a bad position, and several of the others, including the favourite, Paul Caret, were being skittled. A furlong from home Six Wheeler came to challenge, but Mint Master hung on to win by a head. Three lengths away Gentlemen's Relish finished third, and Old Orkney was fourth.

OLD ORKNEY'S RUNNING.

The latter ran a very good race, and had the pace been a good one he would probably have won outright. Childs settled down last on him, and he had a clear course in the straight, but he was just a little outpaced then, when he was making his finishing effort. He will probably miss the Ascot Stakes on Tuesday for the Alexandra Plate on Friday, where he is sure to give a good account of himself. I have never seen him look so well as Major Sneyd produced him this afternoon. Although Paul Caret was the victim of some misadventure in the race, I do not think he was quite good enough. The race was far too slow for Posterity, of whom nothing like the best was seen here.

Taken all in all, it was a very unsatisfactory race, and I am not sure that the best horse won. It did, however, serve to bring a long delayed turn of luck to Sir Victor Sassoon, who has spent large sums of money in racing in this country, and is the sort of owner one likes to see win a valuable stake like this.

The King has been unfortunate in his ventures at the meeting, for his Fairy Story, who was one of three runners that took part in the last race, the Chorlton Plate, was beaten by the odds-on chance, Norland, which made Lord Derby's first success here this time.

In the Brackley Welter Handicap a shade of odds was laid on the North country colt, Old Friend, but, in a thrilling finish, he appears to have been run out of it by a short head by Pergamus, who was giving him a year. Most people except the judge thought that the second had just got up. There is no doubt that in a stride or two past the post he was in front.

AMERICAN COLT WINS.

An interesting winner of the afternoon was the American-bred colt, Instigator, who, in the Cotton Stakes, where he was ridden by Harry Beasley, beat the favourite, Ponsardin, by three-parts of a length. Instigator is trained by the American, Loftus, at Ogbourne, and was his first winner in this country since he arrived last winter with a small team of horses belonging to Mr. C. J. Ryan. Mr. Ryan is a son of the late Mr. T. F. Ryan, who had a few horses with Mr. Persse for some years before his death. Mr. T. F. Ryan was a great character in his way, and was associated with the late Alan McDonough, who was a well-known amateur rider in Ireland a great many years ago. Mr. Ryan accumulated an enormous fortune in the traction business in America, and was always keen on keeping a few racehorses. His son owns a very useful colt in Instigator, who won very easily this afternoon. He is by the American horse, Stimulus, a son of that great sire Ultimus, who has headed the list of winning stallions in the United States on several occasions.

None of the other races was very interesting. The first was won easily by Duffield, whom "Boxer" Cannon trains for Mr. G. H. Peek. He made all the running, and beat Shady Lady in a canter by three lengths. They were a poor lot in the Friday Selling Handicap, which Heart of Gold won for Six Wheeler's owner by a neck from the ungenerous Radio Rag. Mr. A. Falcon won the other selling race with Portia's Plea, a speedy gelding by Stratford, which beat Pheidon by half a length.

SELECTIONS.

The Salford Borough Handicap, which has been won by so many good horses in the past, will see only a small field to-morrow, and although I know Duchess of Mars to be fancied, I think it will rest between Rattlin the Reefer and KODAK. The latter may win. SCOTFORD may win the Red Rose Stakes and SILVER GILT the Wolverton Plate.

At Gatwick LULWORTH COVE may win the June Handicap and UNLIKELY the Crabbet Plate.

FLUTE seems to have a splendid chance in the Coleford Plate at Chepstow, where ROSOLIO II. may win the Pitman's Plate.

Baldoyle July Meeting.

Entries close on Wednesday next for three races to be decided at above meeting. Particulars appear in our advertising columns.

Former Trainer Dead.

A. Walters, formerly a trainer of racehorses at Letcombe Bassett, near Wantage, died on Thursday night. He was 79 years of age. While training on the Continent one of his patrons was the King of Sweden.

Horses for Export.

Slight Mishap to Ortello.

Ortello, the Italian challenger for the Ascot Gold Cup, overreached himself in a striding-pace gallop over a mile and a quarter at Newmarket yesterday. Beyond a minor cut, he seems none the worse, and he is expected to do a good gallop to-morrow.

An Unlucky Loser.

H. Jellis, who rode Slave Trade filly in the Horley Selling Pate at Gatwick yesterday lost his off-side iron when his leather broke a few strides from the post. In the circumstances Slave Trade filly, who finished second, beaten a head, may have been unlucky not to have won.

MANCHESTER TO-DAY: PROBABLE STARTERS AND BETTING.

KODAK FANCIED FOR CHIEF HANDICAP.

POLVERAJA MAY MAKE AMENDS.

At Castle Irwell this afternoon the chief event is the Red Rose Stakes, but from a speculative point of view the Salford Borough Handicap will be much more interesting. Mr. Sol Joel has a chance of winning this with Porthole, who runs in preference to Fleeting Memory, who has been scratched, and if Porthole gives his best running he should be concerned with the finish. He ran well when fourth to Clarette in the Epsom Handicap, and was hampered when second to Arctic Light in a big field for the Lingfield Handicap. Northern interests will be confined to Kodak, who has an obvious chance on the form she showed when dead-heating with Reedsmouth for second place to Quartrain at York. Prior to that she had scored in runaway fashion at Chester. Nice Prospect seems to have deteriorated and failed in plating company last time out, and although Duchess of Mars may run prominently I select from Porthole and Kodak, and give preference to the latter.

The Red Rose Stakes may be fought out by Hakem, Polveraja and Scotford, and although Polveraja failed on Wednesday in the Royal Stndard Stakes he may go better over five furlongs, and with his light weight I select him to win.

In the Lytham Stakes choice falls on Fiesole, winner of his last four races, and Silver Gilt should secure the Wolverton Plate.

GATWICK TO-DAY: PROBABLE STARTERS AND BETTING.

A VOTE FOR LULWORTH COVE.

This afternoon at Gatwick most interest may centre in the June Handicap, run over a mile and a half, and this is assigned to Lulworth Cove; and in an open problem for the Crabbet Plate I take sides with Avalon, as he gave indications of ability in his only previous outing, wherein he was second to the smart Ready Response colt. Osculator is expected to give Gordon Richards a winning ride in the Emlyn Handicap.

LE PHARE FAVOURITE FOR THE ROYAL HUNT CUP.

There was a small attendance last night at the Victoria Club for the call-over on the Royal Hunt Cup. Le Phare was installed favourite, and was backed to win about £4,000 at 100 to 8 and 100 to 9, leaving 10 to 1 the top tender. That price was the best offered for Midlothian without an acceptor. Racedale was supported to win about £1,000 at 100 to 7, leaving 100 to 8 to win about £1,500, and Ecilath to [illegible] best offer. A few small wagers were booked against the other candidates. The card on the Royal Hunt Cup will be called over at the Beaufort Club at 6.15 on Monday and Tuesday.

THE TEST MATCH.

ENGLAND'S BAD HALF HOUR.

GRIMMETT IN A DEADLY SPELL TAKES THREE FOR EIGHT.

HOBBS AND CHAPMAN TO THE RESCUE.

THE first Test match at Trent Bridge, Nottingham, yesterday, was interrupted by showers.

Chapman won the toss and England batted first, but made such a bad start that four wickets were down for 71.

Grimmett at one period had three wickets for eight runs.

Hobbs and Chapman improved England's position, and at the close the score was 241 for 8 wickets. Hobbs made 78 and Chapman 52.

SHOWERS INTERRUPT THE PLAY AT TRENT BRIDGE.

Round about one o'clock, at Trent Bridge yesterday, England had one disastrous half-hour, in which four of her best batsmen left, while 18 runs were scored, so that four wickets were down for 71. The side at once became involved in a decidedly uphill struggle, and fortunately for them Hobbs rose to the occasion, playing the stern, watchful kind of innings that the circumstances warranted. To the Surrey batsman belonged chief credit for the measure of recovery effected by England in between the rainshowers, which considerably curtailed the playing hours. A. P. F. Chapman, too, had an important share in pulling round the game, and, playing a true captain's innings, he stayed with Hobbs in a fifth wicket partnership that added 82 in an hour and five minutes.

J. B. Hobbs.

The skilful flighting and good length spinners of Grimmett caused England's early troubles, and it must be said that the Australian bowlers got enough out of the wicket to suggest it was not quite so perfect as it looked.

A DECEPTIVE WICKET.

Exactly the same stretch of turf prepared for the rained-ruined Test with Australia in 1926 was used, and the groundsmen and others, well able to form an opinion, considered it was full of runs. But, with such a master batsman as Hobbs struggling nearly two hours and a half for 50, and Wall occasionally making the ball rise quickly, the inference is that the pitch was not altogether ready. Still, when Woodfull called wrong to the spin of the coin, Chapman naturally took first innings.

The Selection Committee left out J. C. White and K. S. Duleepsinhji from the thirteen players called on to attend, and made the Sussex amateur twelfth man. Australia omitted A. Hurwood, C. W. Walker and E. L. A'Beckett, and had A. Jackson as twelfth man. All the players wore black armlets as a mark of respect to the late Sir Frederick Toone.

Hobbs and Sutcliffe began England's innings with a stand of 53 in seventy minutes, but the Yorkshireman could consider himself lucky to stay so long. He should have been caught by Hornibrook at short slip off Grimmett after scoring 10 out of 22. Sutcliffe, however, was, no doubt, seriously handicapped by a painful blow on the right hand from a ball by Wall that kicked up. The introduction of Fairfax into the attack with 51 scored furnished Australia with the first success, Sutcliffe being taken high up at first slip by Hornibrook with the left hand. The ball appeared to glance off the handle of his bat

GRIMMETT'S EFFECTIVENESS.

Very quickly Australia secured a strong grip on the game, Grimmett becoming so effective that, in three overs, he secured three wickets for 9 runs. At 63, Hammond, who has never shown his form at Trent Bridge, was leg before; Woolley was stumped off the next ball, and Hendren just touched an off break on to his wicket. Thus, when Chapman joined Hobbs, the board showed 71 and four men out.

CHAPMAN HITS OUT.

Bowling seventeen overs before lunch, Grimmett had 33 runs scored off him, but England's captain proceeded to attack the slow bowler after the interval, in a way that roused over twenty thousand people to much enthusiasm. An interruption for about half an hour, owing to bad light and rain, did not disturb Chapman. If not particularly enterprising against the other bowlers, he certainly got Grimmett away with ease, cutting, off driving and hooking by sound strokes. When, at 153, he lifted the ball in driving Hornibrook and was caught at long off, Chapman claimed 52 of the 82 added for the wicket. Such skill did he show in placing his strokes through gaps in the field, that his score contained ten 4's.

A. P. F. Chapman.

There followed another break in the cricket, rain and its effect causing a delay from just after half-past three until five twenty-five. Therefore, play yesterday lasted ten minutes short of four hours, and until the last quarter of an hour Hobbs kept his end up.

HOBBS'S GREAT INNINGS.

He set himself to a task of determined defence and discreet hitting of anything inaccurate or short of a length. Consequently his batting lacked its customary sparkle, yet none of the five bowlers used exposed any weakness in his armour, and, although for the most part careful in dealing with Grimmett, he made splendidly timed late cuts from the slow bowler. Another special feature of Hobbs's innings was his hooking of short-pitched balls. Good off drives by Larwood marked the sixth wicket stand for 35 runs, and with R. W. V. Robins in, Hobbs helped to carry the total to 218. Then off McCabe, who first took the ball at 187, the Surrey man gave a catch to second slip. So closed the outstanding effort of the day—78 very valuable runs, including seven 4's. Not the least fault could be urged against the famous batsman. R. W. V. Robins seized every reasonable opportunity of scoring during the last quarter of an hour, making his strokes to the off-side particularly well, but Tate played the last ball of the day on to his wicket, and stumps were drawn with the score 241 for eight wickets.

C. V. Grimmett.

England derived some satisfaction from their performance, because only once before had they put together a score of over 200 in a Test match with Australia at Trent Bridge. Altogether, despite the unfortunate weather, those present saw really interesting cricket by reason of the varying fortunes of the encounter. As the earlier Australian games have suggested, Grimmett proved by far the most effective bowler, and so far he has taken five wickets for 106. Grimmett's success in dismissing three men while 18 runs were scored was virtually a repetition of what Gregory accomplished in 1921 on the same ground, when England, winning the toss, lost three wickets for that number of runs, all to the fast bowler, a disastrous start to the match, from which there was no recovery.

The number of people paying for admission was 15,763, the receipts amounting to £1,523. Score:—

HEAVY RAIN LAST NIGHT.

POOR PROSPECTS FOR RESUMPTION OF PLAY TO-DAY.

Relentless rain at Nottingham last night saturated the outfield at Trent Bridge, and made pools of water in many parts of the ground. The wicket was covered, but after hours of rain it must have been affected. Lowering clouds held poor promise for the morning.

BOWLERS BEST.

26 WICKETS FALL IN THE FREE STATE-CRUSADERS MATCH.

Twenty-six wickets fell at Rathmines yesterday, where the Civil Service Crusaders began the last match of their Dublin tour against a Free State XI. The bowlers had matters pretty much their own way, the best return being that of Boucher, who took five of the Crusaders' wickets for 17. As the match stands the Free State XI., with six wickets down in their second innings, are 189 ahead.

The Free State side made a most disastrous start in their first innings. D. R. Pigot and J. A. O'Donnell were out before a run was scored. J. B. Ganly, J. C. Boucher and A. P. Kelly came to the rescue, however. The first-named got 49 in his usual vigorous style, while Boucher made 23 by correct cricket.

The Crusaders also made a bad start, and half their wickets were down for 23, of which W. L. Evans had made 17. P. R. Broomfield and H. Everett doubled the score for the sixth wicket, but none of the others gave much trouble. Broomfield, who made 25, hit five boundaries. C. J. Little, A. D. Barber and Ganly, all batted well for their respective contributions in the Free State second innings.

A resumption will be made this morning at 11.30. Score:—

ROWING.

THE TRINITY WEEK REGATTA.

ENJOYABLE REUNION AT ISLANDBRIDGE.

One missed a couple of the Dublin crews at Islandbridge yesterday, but Drogheda, Dolphin, Belfast Commercial, Belfast B.C., Cork Harbour, Dundalk, Dublin University and Lady Elizabeth crews were on the water, and there was no lack of interest in the proceedings. The rowing, too, was up to an excellent standard, and the regatta season may be said to have been opened most auspiciously.

It was a delightful afternoon, with a refreshing breeze to temper the heat of the sun, and for a first day the attendance of rowing men and their lady friends was well up to the average.

So far as the rowing was concerned, while it was right good, it did not provide any outstanding feature, except, perhaps, the defeat of Dublin University, the holders, by Drogheda in the second heat of the Lady Elizabeth Challenge Cup, in which the well-balanced Drogheda four rowed a very fine race, indeed. The Cork Harbour crew also showed impressive form in the same event against Lady Elizabeth A. and Belfast Commercial achieved a well-merited victory over Dolphin in a capital race in the opening heat of the Ladies' Cup; while the Drogheda eight also distinguished themselves in the Grand Challenge Cup against Lady Elizabeth B.C.

This was one of the prettiest and best races of the evening, although it was not quite so exciting as the struggle between Drogheda and Dublin University B in Heat A of the Towers Cup. The Trinity men got the better of a rousing finish by a length and a half, but the umpire, owing to some fouling by both crews, ordered it to be re-rowed, and then the margin was reduced by the Drogheda crew to a bare half length.

To-day the regatta will conclude, and the finals should provide some thrilling races.

THE BARTON SHIELD.

PORTMARNOCK WIN THE LEINSTER FINAL.

In the leading match Crowley and Robertson, of Portmarnock, beat Kilduff and Coyle, Milltown, by two holes, but Thrift and Moore reduced the deficit by one against Gill and H. Bell. Crowley and Robertson were one down at the turn, but they turned this into a lead at the eleventh. They were both hitting long shots, while their short game was also sound.

Thrift and Moore won the first three holes, but lost the next four. They, however, squared at the eighth, and halved the ninth. Gill and Bell took the lead again at the tenth, but lost the eleventh. Thrift and Moore got a two at the twelfth for the lead, and lost it at the thirteenth. They took the fourteenth and fifteenth, and lost the sixteenth. They had another win at the seventeenth to become two up again, but lost the eighteenth, and won the match by one hole.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

TONE AND COMMENT.

DUBLIN IRREGULARLY DISPOSED.

GUINNESS AND COATS LOWER AGAIN.

The week-end market was again uncertain, and fluctuated after a poor volume of business was put through, with Guinness and Coats outstanding points of interest owing to continuance of sale pressure in the former, and the items for discouragement drawn from the chairman's speech at the annual meeting of shareholders of the latter concern, held in Glasgow the previous day. But local securities had once more a satisfactory following of support in most cases. Cables and Wireless "A" and "B" Ord. Stocks again fell heavily on London rumours about coming report. There was a quiet market in Government National Loans, and prices remain easy. War Loan 5 per cent. Stock was well supported, and closed harder. The official marking of 90¾ on 10th inst. for Land Bonds 4½ per cent., with interest from next gale, is now notified an error. Banks were mostly better, but Munsters were quieter. There appeared again a large selling order in Guinness units, and the price was once more adversely affected, and closed at lowest. Dublin Distillers "A" 5s. Shares were dealt in at 3s., but few shares were sold, and the Ord. Stock was held for 18. British and Irish Steam and Grand Canal issues remain firm. Home Rails opened and closed rather harder, but actual business done was poor in volume. Trams closed quiet sellers, especially Dublin United Ord. Shares. Among Commercial and Industrial Shares, Coats opened freely on offer, and English Sewing Cottons were also on sale. Courtaulds were firm all day in a quiet market. Leading Tobaccos met a little attention and recovered, after opening dull and lower. Imperial Chemicals were sympathetically affected by the weak, unsettled market reports the other side. Unilever issues more or less marked time, with a firmer general tone. Johnston Bakery Shares were wanted, as also J. G. Mooney and Alex. Thom issues, but no shares offered. Irish-American Oils Pref. were in request. Irish Times Pref. issues were in demand, and higher. Gouldings were still firm. The Irish Civil Service Building Society report an increased interim dividend, i.e., 15s. per share, against 12s. 6d. hitherto, but no business resulted.

LONDON FIRMER.

BRITISH FUNDS STRONGER.

Although the volume of dealings passing in the London Stock Markets yesterday remained on the small side, rather brighter conditions prevailed in the majority of sections. Here and there, however, dull and easier spots were apparent, and, taken as a whole, the list of price movements presented an irregular appearance. General Electrics provided one of the best markets, the announcement of a cash bonus coming as a pleasant surprise, and although the best level was not maintained, they still registered a substantial improvement. Decidedly firmer conditions ruled in the gilt-edged market, with the Conversion issues outstanding. The Foreign Government stock market also displayed a firmer appearance, with Chinese issues and French Fives and Fours appreciating. Spanish Fours, German Sevens, and Brazil 6½ p.c. (1927), however, all finished lower. Little of interest transpired among Home Rails, but the few movements scored were favourable to holders. Colonial and Foreign Rails, on the other hand, remained depressed, Central Argentines being an especially weak market. The Industrial section as a whole made an irregular showing, while dealings, with a few exceptions, were on a modest scale.

INDUSTRIAL MARKET.

DECLINE IN CABLES AND WIRELESS.

GENERAL ELECTRICS GOOD.

Although a little support was noticeable in places, there was still a good deal of irregularity in the Industrial market yesterday. Here and there some forced liquidation was reported, chiefly from the North and on Continental account. A fresh set-back was witnessed in Cables and Wireless Stocks, which rather suggests that dealers are not anticipating a favourable showing when the accounts are presented, but there was a rally late in the day from the lowest prices.

The "A" Ord. lost 2 at 37 after dipping to 35½, and the "B" Ord. 1½ at 17, after touching 16; the Pref. lost a point at 88. The "Record" leaders moved in uncertain fashion. Columbia Graphophones rallied 1/16 to 4 7/16, but H.M.V.'s gave way ⅛ to 4 3/16. Transatlantic issues were quietly steady.

Electricals gave a mixed display. Of the Equipments, General Electric further advanced at one time to 52s. 3d., eventually closing with a net gain of 1s. 3d. at 51s. 3d.

Apart from Watney Defd., which strengthened to the extent of 9d. to 61s., Breweries continued on the down grade. Guinness were marked down 1s. to 102s. 9d., and Ohlssons a similar amount to 30s.

Among Tobaccos, "Imps" steadied to 4 13/16, but "Bats" remained dull around 5 11/32.

Rayons generally were well maintained under the influence of more encouraging trade advices, but business was on a small scale. Courtaulds had buyers at 2 3/16, with American Celanese fractionally harder at 4⅝.

Textiles seemed undecided. J. and P. Coats were marked down 1s. at 59s., with Bleachers on offer at 18s. 6d.

Rather more interest was taken in the Unilever issues, which were finally without variation at 2 19/32, the new Ord. improving 3d. to 8s. 6d. The few alterations recorded among Banks proved favourable to holders.

In the Shipping group, P. and O. Defd. again attracted a small measure of support, and rose 6d. to 43s. 6d., but Furness, Withys were scaled down a few pence to 32s. 3d. Royal Mail Ord. stock was marked down 1½ to 18½, but the Pref. and Deb. stock were maintained at the overnight levels, and White Star Pref. marked a further gain of 9d. at 11s. 3d.

In the earlier dealings, Imperial Chemical Ord. proved a weak feature owing to forced liquidation. After dipping to 22s. 7½d., however, support was forthcoming, and the shares rallied to the overnight level of 23s. 6d.; the Pref. finished 6d. lower at 23s. 7½d., while the Defd. lost the turn to 7s. 4½d.

Dunlops drooped to 11s. 7½d., but United Molasses came in for quiet support, leaving off with a fractional improvement at 3 1/32. Kreuger and Toll hardened to 28⅝, and Swedish Match closed without variation at 15⅜.

OIL SHARES IRREGULAR.

Although unaccompanied by any marked increase in the volume of transactions, Oil shares had a distinctly harder appearance in the early hours of yesterday, a moderate demand existing for the leaders and a few of the more speculative descriptions, to which prices responded. In the afternoon, however, a bout of liquidation was experienced, while Paris came in a small seller of the Eagle issues. As a result initial gains were lost, and at the close, although price movements were not of much importance, the list presented an irregular appearance.

RUBBER SHARES IDLE.

Idle conditions continued to characterise the Rubber share market yesterday, and the volume of dealings put through was, if anything, on an even smaller scale than has been the case recently. The firmer tendency manifest on the previous day was not maintained, however, and share price movements at the close showed a margin against holders. A steadier tone ruled in the commodity section, spot and June selling up to 6 1/16d. per pound, and July to Sept. to 6 3/16d. per pound. It is anticipated that the London stocks of rubber on Monday next will show an increase of some 500 tons, whilst Liverpool stocks are likely to show an advance of 1,300 tons.

LONDON MINING MARKET QUIET.

COPPER AND TIN FURTHER DEPRESSED.

Business again ruled on a small scale in the Mining market yesterday. Certain specialities in the Kaffir department, however, could boast some popularity. Attention was again mainly directed to a few Cape favourites, but among the finance descriptions the members of the Anglo-American group were still rather out of favour, and the offering of a few shares on an unwilling market caused a further recession in values, and the list at the close presented an irregular appearance. During the morning Rhodesians were under the influence of the previous day's depression, and some further offering of the leaders was in progress. Later, support on a moderate scale was forthcoming, and a recovery was witnessed. The price of tin continued on the down grade, a further drop of £1 3s. 9d. to £133 11s. 3d. per ton being recorded. The Share market was very quiet, and although there was no selling pressure there was very little demand, and several counters marked small shrinkages. The price of copper again declined, closing £1 2s. 6d. lower on the day at £48 13s. 9d. per ton. Rio Tinto fell no less than 27s. 6d. to 35½, and Tharsis and South American Copper lost the turn. Business in Miscellaneous descriptions was at a very low ebb, and the only quotable alteration was a small recovery in Santa Gertrudis. Closing prices:—

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

DEARER GOVERNMENT BORROWING.

The hardening tendency of discount rates noticeable during this week received a fillip yesterday from the allotment of Treasury bills at 2 7/16 p.c. This is the highest figure since the Bank rate came down to 3 p.c. on May 1, and it compares with only a few pence over 2 1/16 p.c. on the day following that change. Very largely the result is due to the prospect of some monetary stringency in the next two weeks, for apart from the expected excess of payments of Treasury bills over the amount of maturities, it will not be long before preparations are started for the customary increased requirements incidental to the end of the half-year. The latest development in the situation may be regarded as definitely settling the question of a further reduction in the Bank rate, in regard to which there was a somewhat sanguine feeling some time ago. The extent to which market quotations have now risen shows that the next movement in the official minimum is likely to be upwards, thus confounding opinions based on the probable effect of restricted trade and low commodity prices.

GOVERNMENT FINANCE.

This unfavourable turn in the monetary situation is a disadvantage to the Government. As a result of a deliberate policy of reducing the Floating Debt as much as possible the cost of replacing Treasury bills was greatly reduced, though, of course, the prime factors were the successive reductions in the Bank rate. By selling Treasury bills at, say, 2⅛ p.c., a considerable saving was effected in comparison with the corresponding cost a year ago, especially as the amount has been reduced so much. Now the market is moving against the Government in this respect, and the situation lessens the prospect of a successful issue of a big debt conversion scheme, such as was talked of two or three weeks ago. Partly because of the floation of the German International Loan this matter has not been discussed of late. But it would be premature to assert that it had been definitely shelved by the Government.

COURTAULDS.

It is generally understood that the business of Courtaulds in the first few months of this year was adversely affected by the uncertainty in regard to the Budget. There is reason to believe that since then the position has improved, and it was unofficially stated yesterday that large numbers of workmen discharged some time ago have been re-installed, for most of the works are now running almost at full time. This is satisfactory if true, but the point should not be overlooked that the company is obtaining lower prices for its products, and the feeling in regard to the interim dividend—which is expected to be announced at the end of next month—is not very optimistic. A year ago the payment was 4 p.c., and it was followed by a balance dividend of 6 p.c., making 10 p.c. free of tax for the year, as compared with 15 p.c. for 1928. For 1927 the distribution was 25 p.c., and it was supplemented then by a capitalised bonus of 100 p.c.; that is to say, one share was given free for every share held. The general idea seems to be that on this occasion the interim dividend will be lowered from 4 to 3 p.c.

CABLES AND WIRELESS, LTD.

The first annual general meeting of Cables and Wireless, Ltd., will take place next month, the delay being due to the position in which the company is placed. This great imperial concern has not only to obtain accounts from its own stations, but to exchange accounts with a large number of companies in the Dominions and in foreign countries, at whose stations messages passing over the Cables and Wireless system have originated or been received. Similarly accounts have to be exchanged with most foreign Governments, and Cables and Wireless, Ltd., is not in a position to present its own accounts and hold its general meeting earlier than six months after the termination of its financial year. The company is unable to apply compulsion to other companies and foreign Governments who have to exchange accounts with it, and cannot require from them the same expedition as can be demanded from its own stations. On this occasion, moreover, the period for which the accounts have to be presented is one of 15 months, and includes the transfer of the Cables and Wireless systems from the constituent companies and the Government to the control of Imperial and International Communications, Ltd.

MORE CAPITAL FOR RHODESIA.

An issue of 600,000 shares of 10s. each at a price of 30s. per share, with calls, is proposed by the Rhodesian Anglo-American, Ltd. A large proportion of the present cash resources of the company will be required to provide for some of its important interests in Northern Rhodesia, the finance necessary to bring them to the production stage, and the issue of reserve shares now decided on is with a view to providing funds for expanding interests in that field when favourable opportunities occur.

DECCA RECORD.

The directors of the Decca Record Co. are satisfied that the business, as a whole, is on a profit-earning basis, for the faults of manufacture, organisation and control which at first affected operations seriously have, they say, now been corrected. There is reason to believe that this opinion is something more than a pious hope. The trading of the first year, however, was distinctly disappointing, for it resulted in a debit balance of £89,683. Apart from the difficulties indicated, it is claimed that the accounts have been framed on the most rigorous basis after charging all possible items of expenditure to the period under review, and without opening any development or suspense account. There is, of course, no dividend on the £987,473 of £1 ordinary shares, while that on the £230,696 7 per cent. cum. preference shares is in arrear for the year to March 31 last, to which date the accounts are made up.

The transfer books of the Participating Preference shares of the British and Irish Steam Packet Company, Ltd., will be closed from the 16th to 30th June, both days inclusive.

THE MONEY MARKET.

COMFORTABLE CONDITIONS

BILL RATES STIFFER.

Applications were received at the Bank of England yesterday for £35,000,000 Treasury Bills. Tenders dated Monday to Friday next at £99 7s. 7d. get about 92 per cent., above in full, and tenders, dated Saturday at £99 7s. 9d. and above, receive in full. The average rate per cent. indicated is about 2 7/16 as compared with 2 1/16 p.c. last week. Conditions were comfortable in Lombard street, old money being renewed at 1¾ to 2 p.c., while fresh accommodation over the night was offered down to 1½ p.c. Bill rates further stiffened on the Treasury Bill results. Most houses quoted 2 7/16 to 2½ p.c. for fine three months' bank bills, while secondhand Treasuries were offering at 2⅜ p.c. to over. The banks were buyers of July and August bills at 2½ and 2¼ p.c., respectively. Silver was unchanged at 16 5/16d. per oz. spot and 16d. for forward delivery, a little "bear" covering steadying the market. Gold was quoted ½d. lower at 84s. 11½d. per oz. fine. About £669,000 is due from the Cape next week.

At the Bank of England yesterday £23,791 in bar gold was sold.

The trend of the Foreign Exchange market yesterday was decidedly in favour of London. Sterling on New York was finally quoted at 4.85 15/16 as compared with Thursday's close of 4.85 13/16. Canadian dollars were unchanged. Francs were steady and closed without change. The German rate was ¼ per cent. higher on balance at 20.36½, and the Dutch exchange finished at 12.08 5/16. Among the Scandinavian exchanges both Swedish and Norwegian rates were ¼ higher at 18.09¾ and 18.15½ respectively, while Danish kroner cheapened to 18.16. Argentine dollars again lacked support and weakened to 41 13/16, and the milreis closed at 5 17/32 as against 5⅝.

FALL FROM CLIFF.

LONDON TOURIST SERIOUSLY INJURED AT TRAMORE.

A London tourist, George Swiane, met with a serious accident at Tramore yesterday. Swiane was one of a number of tourists who arrived off the cross-Channel boats at Waterford yesterday. With some friends he visited Tramore and, impelled by the spirit of adventure, he alone attempted the ascent of the rugged steps on the face of the cliff between the women's bathing place and Cliff road.

The cliff at this point is about 40ft. high, and when half-way up he apparently missed his footing and fell headlong to the rocks below. He was severely lacerated about the head and body.

His fall fortunately was seen by a boatman named O'Brien, who at once put out to his assistance. O'Brien brought the man ashore, where he was put into an ambulance which had been summoned, and conveyed to Waterford Infirmary. His condition is serious. Swiane resides at Dawnay road, Earlsfield, London.

Stocks on Monday next, London and Liverpool, likely to show an increase of 1,800 tons. JUTE quiet, with slight weakness in early hours; later, however, an upward movement set in due to quite numerous buying orders from Calcutta, and which naturally stiffened the hands of sellers. Firsts, June-July, also July-August to the Continent sold £22 12/6 to £22 15/-, new crop July-August £24, August-September £23 10/- to £23 17/6, September-October £23 12/6 to £23 15/-, lightnings June-July £21 15/-, August-September quoted £22 15/-, hearts June-July sellers £20 10/- c.i.f. Decorticated Cotton Cakes—Prime quality 48/-50 per cent. cake and meal are obtainable at £9 to £9 10/- per ton ex warehouse, and the lower grade at about £8 to £8 10/-; but, as usual at this season of the year, they are more or less neglected

JAS. BYRNE, Esq., Wallstown Castle—"It is a most invaluable remedy for 'Scour' in Calves, a disease which has hitherto baffled veterinary skill."
H. E. TURNER, Esq., Payne's End, Tring—"I find it quite the best remedy and have used it successfully in cases where all other remedies have failed. I consider it a boon to anyone rearing Calves."
E. W. HALL, Esq., Kill-o'-Grange, Blackrock—"The Calf, a pure-bred Jersey, which I am keeping for breeding, was so far gone that it was lying unable to rise and grinding its teeth for death, as I thought. I gave it four large teaspoonfuls the first time, and next day it was up on its feet, and is now past danger. Your medicine should be better known."

FARM WORK IN JUNE.

NORTHERN MINISTRY'S NOTES.

The Northern Ministry of Agriculture, in its Farm Notes for June, states:—The sowing of the turnip crop is well advanced, and the cultivaton of the land for the suppression of weeds will now occupy chief attention.

Owing to the recent protracted spell of dry weather, cases of attack by the turnip "fly" are reported from several districts. Rolling and the careful application of nitrate of soda should help to revive affected crops, although in bad cases resowing is generally necessary. Thistles and docks growing in corn crops and on headlands and waste pieces of land should now be pulled and collected. It is not yet too late to destroy charlock or "preshaugh" in oat crops by the use of a copper sulphate (bluestone) solution, made up by dissolving 12lb. copper sulphate in 40 gallons of water.

Bracken can be most effectively eradicated by persistent cutting before the plants are fully grown, and where cutting is carried out during this month and repeated in six weeks' time the plants will be considerably weakened and the grazing improved.

Growers of potatoes who intend to have their crops inspected for purity should make application to the Ministry before the end of this month. The preference given by importers to certified stocks of seed potatoes was particularly noticeable last year. Preparations should be made during the month for the spraying of the potato crop so that this work may be carried out before the disease appears.

It is yet too early to cut the hay crop, but the mower and other harvesting implements should now be completely overhauled so that possible breakdowns during a busy period may be avoided.

LIVE STOCK.

Where potatoes are still on hand this food can be utilised for effecting a considerable economy in the cost of pig rations. During this month a sharp look-out should be kept for possible attacks by the "maggot fly" in sheep and lambs. The maggots in affected animals should be rubbed out, using carbolic sheep dip to assist in dislodging the maggots. Wounds should finally be dressed with an ointment made up of powdered sulphur and fresh lard. Wool must be properly handled before it leaves the farm so that the best prices may be secured. Leaflet No. 23 gives full particulars regarding the care and handling of this product.

GARDEN AND ORCHARD.

Spring-sown vegetables, such as broccoli, savoy cabbage, cauliflower and leeks, may be planted out now for use next winter or spring. The second spraying of apple trees as a preventive against attacks of apple scab may be given now. "The set" of fruit is heavy on all varieties of apple trees this year. Apples should be thinned now so that the fruit are left singly at intervals of from six to nine inches along the branches. Thinning has the advantage of giving a high proportion of large apples without lowering the yield.

POULTRY.

The attention of readers is again directed to the importance of removing cockerels now from the laying stock. The keeping of cockerels with the laying flock does not increase egg production, but results in fertile eggs, which deteriorate more rapidly than those which are infertile. The cockerels should, therefore, be removed from the laying flock and either penned separately or fattened off. Young cockerels not intended to be kept for stock purposes should be separated from the pullets and fattened off as soon as possible, as prices for chickens generally fall later in the season.

INSURANCE ACTION.

ORDER FOR DISCOVERY OF DOCUMENTS.

(BEFORE THE MASTER OF THE HIGH COURT)

In the case of Terence Gibson, Carrickamore, Co. Monaghan, farmer, against the Irish Life and General Assurance Co., Ltd., Mr. Tobias (instructed by Messrs. John G. Reid and Company) applied on behalf of the plaintiff for an order for the discovery of documents.

The action was brought to recover £650, alleged to be payable by the defendants on foot of a policy of fire insurance dated 8th June, 1923. The plaintiff's dwellinghouse and other property were destroyed by fire on the night of 31st July or the morning of the 1st August, 1928.

The defence, counsel said, was a traverse, and contained two rather strong averments—first, that the plaintiff concealed a material fact which vitiated the policy; and, secondly, that the premises were burned down by the plaintiff's act or with his connivance.

The Master made an order for discovery.

SUTTON MOSQUITO NUISANCE.

STAGNANT WATER TO BE TREATED WITH PARAFFIN.

Mr. P. J. Meighan, B.E., Commissioner, attended at Howth Town Hall yesterday to transact the business of the township.

Dealing with the report of the Surveyor, Mr. F. Higginbotham, Mr. Meighan stated that the difficulties in connection with the supply of Vartry water to the Hill of Howth had been smoothed away and the work had now started. The mosquito nuisance at Sutton had been looked into, and the suggestion that stagnant water, which was responsible for the trouble, should be treated with paraffin was to be carried out. The chief engineer of Merryweather and Sons had recently examined the fire-fighting equipment. He had suggested that an adaptor should be provided, so that the pump might be pressure-fed from the hydrants without fear of bursting the suction hose by pressure feeding with the canvas hose.

INQUEST ON DUBLIN CHILD.

An inquest was opened in the Children's Hospital, Temple street, Dublin, yesterday, on Elizabeth Geraghty, aged eight years, of 32 Middle Gardiner street, Dublin, who was knocked down by a motor cyclist in Lower Dorset street last Sunday, and died in the hospital. After medical evidence had been given by the house surgeon, Dr. O'Meara, who said that the child had two deep scalp wounds and died from shock and hæmorrhage, the inquest was adjourned pending legal proceedings against the motor cyclist.

Mr. E. H. Burne (Messrs. G. Byrne and Co., solicitors) appeared for the cyclist, Richard C. O'Grady; and Mr. H. Lemass for the next-of-kin of the dead child.
